Praying for peace at a camp called David

WASHINGTON — In the ancient book of Psalms, sacred to Jews, Christians and Muslims alike, the prophet David exorted all to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem."

Leaders of those three faiths gathered Thursday to renew that exhortation and to praise what one called the "strong symbolism" of the Mideast summit meeting planned for the camp called David next week.

The religious leaders also asked that the faithful in their respective congregations pray for the success of the meeting to be attended by Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt, and President Carter.

They urged "intensive prayer" by Muslims on Friday, by Jews on Saturday, and by Christians on Sunday, the days of worship for each faith. They also noted that each of the political leaders was known for his strong religious convictions.

Dr. Eugene J. Fisher of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops told newsmen in the conference headquarters here that "In the past histories of our peoples, religion has all too often been interwoven into the fabric of hostility, with tragic results."

On the same theme, Rabbi Daniel Polish, the associate director of the Synagogue Council of America, recalled the discord of the past but said that today they were "speaking with one voice in a call on our common Father" in the shared hope for peace in a part of the world significant to all three faiths.

Dr. Abdul Rahman Osman, of the Islamic Center here, said that "Almighty God gave us the power to choose the way, not just by words but by movement." He echoed the call for a "genuine peace" in the Middle East.

Speaking for the Protestant, Anglican, and Orthodox traditions of Christianity, Dr. William L. Weller of the National Council of Churches invoked the beatitude that proclaims "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

Dr. Weller also noted the "strong symbolism" in the name of the retreat in the mountains of Maryland where the summit meeting is scheduled to take place. It was named David by President Eisenhower for his grandson.

The churchmen, in response to questions, said they had not had enough time to prepare for a joint gathering of Jews, Christians, and Muslims to pray for the outcome of the summit meeting. But each expressed the hope that such gatherings would be arranged spontaneously in communities throughout the nation.

Evans doesn't want prison in Gooding

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING — Gov. John Evans has pulled the rug out from under two committees he appointed to study the women's prison issue in Idaho.

Evans' press secretary, Steve Leroy, Thursday confirmed a report the governor is opposed to placing a state women's prison in the former tuberculosis hospital in Gooding. This despite the appointment by Evans this spring of a Gooding citizens committee and a legislative committee to study the idea.

The governor had expressed his sentiments to Archie Walker of Bliss, chairman of the board of the Idaho Regional Treatment and Training Center located in the state facility, last Thursday at the Salt Lake City Airport.

Walker said when he told the governor about a Sept. 7 meeting scheduled in Gooding by the legislative committee, Evans asked, "What for? I thought that was a dead issue."

Walker said the governor told him he "hadn't heard a word" from Andy James, Gooding attorney who heads the citizens committee Evans appointed to recommend the best use of the state facility.

Evans could not be reached, but Leroy confirmed to the Times-News Thursday afternoon that this accurately represents the governor's feeling about the prison proposal.

Earlier Thursday Leroy said Evans "wants the decision to be made by the local people" and it was apparent to him that after the hearing in Gooding last fall many local residents were "adamantly opposed" to placing the prison in Gooding.

When contacted Thursday, James was surprised by the governor's statement.

"We've put a lot of work into our report," he said, "and if the governor feels that way, our work has been for nothing."

James said his group's final meeting would be held next Thursday night and he expected to send his recommendation to the governor Friday.

While indicating the citizens' recommendation should not be made public before then, James said he sees no reason that the prison and alcohol treatment center cannot both exist at the site.

"There's a tremendous amount of unused space out there," James said. His committee has received only one request for additional use of the space.

Blaine Magistrate Daniel Alban has suggested that a juvenile detention facility be established at the former TB hospital.

James indicated no other state agency had come forward with suggestions for full utilization of the three-building complex, except the legislative committee which reportedly favors putting female prisoners now at Cottonwood in Gooding.

Meantime, the recently formed Citizens Against a Gooding Prison is conducting a vigorous campaign of door to door contacts and telephone calls to insure a big turnout to oppose the proposal at the meeting next Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Gooding High School.

They believe the citizens committee named by the governor is not representative of the community and that at least two members, known to be against the prison, have not been notified of meetings.

The anti-prison group has pointed out it would cost the state some $60,000 in rent to provide similar floor space now occupied by two state agencies located in the facility, the Health and Welfare Department and the Department of Lands.

The alcohol treatment center, which opened in October 1976 in the newest building in the complex, recently negotiated a new agreement with the State Land Board to increase its rent to about $10,000 per year, depending upon the amount of patients.

Center officials have repeatedly said their patient load has grown, despite the uncertainty about the prison proposal. If assured of a home they said their clients would soon increase and they would purchase the facility from the state.

The facility is under the jurisdiction of the State Land Board which will issue the final decision whether the property is to turned over to the Department of Corrections for use as a prison.

Ambassador's son apparently was trying to defend himself

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The oldest son of Mexico's ambassador to the United States bled to death after being shot apparently trying to defend himself from his Communist kidnappers, an autopsy report showed Thursday.

The body of Hugo Margain Jr., 35, abducted Tuesday night in a bloody ambush that also wounded two of his bodyguards and a kidnapper, was found Wednesday dumped alongside a highway 22 miles east of Mexico City.

Police Chief Arturo Durazo told reporters that hundreds of officers were immediately assigned to a nationwide hunt for the kidnappers, but he conceded, "We have no leads."

Unofficial sources said police were investigating the possibility that Margain was killed by university students opposed to an anti-drug campaign he launched recently at the National University.

U.S. Ambassador Patrick Lucey issued a statement Thursday expressing outrage over "this brutal attack" and "so senseless an act of violence."

Police sources said the 35-year-old Margain apparently put up a fight while being driven away from the National University campus in Mexico City and was shot in the right thigh with a 9 mm bullet.

The autopsy report said the bullet severed an artery and Margain bled to death despite the efforts of his kidnappers, who stripped him below the waist in a vain effort to treat the wound before he died.

The abductors wrapped two blankets around his body, clad only in a blue jacket and socks, and dumped it on the roadside where it was found by a passerby early Wednesday. The body went unidentified until Wednesday night.

Margain's father, ambassador Hugo Margain Sr., who had returned from Washington to Mexico City before the kidnapping, was in seclusion at the family residence.

The bodyguards and one of the terrorists were wounded in the shootout before Margain was shoved into his black Ford sedan and driven away. The blood-stained car was found abandoned later near a highway.

Inside the car was a communique to Margain's family.

"The kidnapping of Hugo Margain has as its sole objective raising funds for the struggle of the proletariat. Wait for instructions," said the note, signed "Execution Squad of the 23rd of September Communist League."

A member of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Dancers at the folk festival

There's top 40 to Indian music . . . and oldies but goodies too

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

ELKHORN — American Indian music and dances may be a far cry from disco and the Top 40, but their popularity also rises and falls.

The leader of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Dancers of Fort Hall says the songs of his people go up and down like singles on the record charts.

The Shoshone-Bannock dance group, which tours the country performing native American dances for mostly non-Indian groups, showed a crowd of about 300 men, women and children at the Northern Rockies Folk Festival at Elkhorn that dance is a looking glass into Indian culture.

The performance of Indian music and dances, accompanied by brief explanations of each piece, made it clear Indian dance encompasses far more than the stereotyped war and rain dances exploited in Hollywood Westerns.

With the performance including courting dances and wildlife dances, friendship dances as well as war dances, the tribal dancers awoke the folk festival audience to the wide range of concerns of Indian culture.

Although the styles are very different, the concerns of Indian dance and contemporary music are often the same.

Lionell Boyer, leader of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Dancers, noted, "We have our own Top 40 that are sung through Pow Wow season. Then we also have our oldies but goodies."

Boyer's point is Indian music and dance is not so far removed in purpose from the music and dance of popular American culture.

And to make this point is the reason he says the Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Dancers tour the country outside their reservation in eastern Idaho.

"I think the main intent in our performing is to put the Indian into today's media and show that the Indian is cast in a negative light," Boyer said. "It's more or less public relations, letting them know that we are not the bad guys on television, that we're next-door neighbors and we have a heritage."

It's this heritage that Indian dance preserves. What Boyer described as the "oldies but goodies" are songs and dances passed from father to son down through generations of Bannock and Shoshoni Indians.

"The songs that are sung are not written," Boyer observed. "They are passed from day to day and from age to age."

The first dance performed Tuesday at the folk festival was a slow war dance in which a young Indian rhythmically beat an animal skin drum and intoned sounds hypnotically, while two male dancers individually interpreted the song and drum beat through free-form movements.

Boyer noted that most of the war dances are abstract and interpretive, allowing the dancer to move however he feels the music, whether it be a simple walking step or a fast whirling motion.

A second dance, called the Sage Chicken Dance, was more symbolic. Two male dancers shook up and down like a sage hen in the field. Another animal dance honored the buffalo. Dancers moved slowly and nobly, like the great plains animal that was once the mainstay of many native American tribes.

Most of the dances in the Indian culture are social dances, Boyer pointed out, and they use traditional dance steps passed down through the ages.

The Elkhorn audience also viewed a large round dance involving both men and women, as well as a courting dance in which the woman asks the man to dance and the man cannot refuse without paying a dollar to the woman.

"A lot of people say this is how grandma met grandpa," observed Willie LaMere, a Bannock and Shoshoni Indian.

A final friendship dance took in the festival audience and allowed men, women, and children to join in a large snake of dancers as they wound through the crowd.

Although the Shoshoni-Bannock are no longer at war and only see buffalo on a preserve at the Fort Hall reservation, they continue to help preserve their past by carrying it into the present day.

Students take up positions against national guard invasion

MATAIGALPA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The national guard stormed the city of Matalgalpa with helicopters and armored cars Thursday to crush a four-day rebellion by a rag-tag army of students fighting to overthrow President Anastasio Somoza. Witnesses said casualties were in the hundreds.

Acting on Somoza's orders to attack "with everything you've got," the national guard sent helicopters, armored cars and at least one tank into the city 75 miles north of Managua to break up makeshift barricades manned by some 500 students armed with pistols and shotguns.

Witnesses said the studepts, most of them just children between the ages of 12 and 16, did not stand a chance.

"It's a massacre," said Eduardo Sierro, the distributor in northern Nicaragua for the Standard Oil Co. "Somoza is the Idi Amin of Nicaragua."

The attack began shortly before noon Thursday after Somoza ordered the troops in to crush the students, whom he likened to "punks" and "gangs that take over the South Bronx."

Fighting was still raging more than six hours later with automatic weapons fire and machinegun bursts echoing across the battle-scarred city of 50,000 after nightfall.

Dr. Cesar Amador Kuhl, president of the Matalgalpa Medical Association, said at least 50 people had been killed and 200 injured in the first hours of battle. Among the casualties were six National Guardsmen and an elderly man shot in the head as he peered out a window.

But these did not include casualities "in the heavlest areas of battle" which Red Cross ambulances were prevented from reaching, he said.

"President Carter is the only man who can tell Somoza to stop this crime. The students will not surrender. They will resist. Before it is over all of them will die," Amador said.

In Managua, Normal Wolfson, the New York pueile relations agent hired by Somoza to deal with the foreign press, termed the assault "a cleanup operation" that should be over "by tomorrow (Friday) night."

He said the official government casualty figures were one dead and nine wounded.

Search-protection bill barely passes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Assembly Thursday narrowly passed a bill protecting newspaper and broadcast offices from surprise searches by law enforcement officials.

The bill stemmed from a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing police with search warrants to seize reporters' photographs or notes. The court ruled that police had a constitutional right to search the offices of the Stanford University Daily for film that might show demonstrators violating the law.

In addition to providing protection for reporters, the bill would allow some imprisoned women to be placed in community treatment programs with their infant children.

It was sent to the governor on a 42-31 vote, two more than required.

Some legislators opposed the measure on grounds it contained two unrelated subjects. But the Assembly voted on Tuesday that the subjects were "germaine" and could be contained in one bill.

Demonstration in Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Riot police fired on hundreds of anti-government demonstrators who rampaged through the holy Moslem city of Mashad Thursday, killing two youths and wounding a third, reports from the scene said.

The clash erupted during mourning ceremonies for the victims of a previous clash with police last month.

Thousands of people marched peacefully through the streets of Mashad after attending mosque ceremonies for the dead. The peaceful marchers dispersed after a four-hour ceremony and street demonstrations.

New anti-drug pact

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Colombia, worried its billion-dollar-a year cocaine and marijuana industry will start affecting its own people, said Thursday it will sign a new anti-drug pact with Washington.

The announcement was made by Attorney General Jaime Serrano following a meeting with newly elected President Julio Cesar Turbay, who has vowed to crack down on Colombia's drug traffickers.

Spy plane crashes

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — A Soviet spy plane crashed Monday in a strategic sector of the Norwegian Artic, Norwegian officials announced Thursday.

A radio operator on the tiny island of Hopen on the Spitsbergen Archipelago said the bodies of three Soviet fliers were found near the totally-wrecked plane that crashed three miles from the radio station.

The plane was believed to be a TU-126 — the Soviet equivalent of the U.S. Boeing E3a Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) planes.

Basques declare war

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Basque separatist guerrillas declared a permanent war against Spain's police Thursday and targeted the country's interior minister for assassination.

Hurricane Ella, picking up steam and classified as dangerous, churned toward the mid-Atlantic coastline with 90 mph winds Thursday and parts of West Virginia mopped up from floods triggered by heavy rains for the second time in a month.

The National Hurricane Center said Ella, the season's fifth hurricane, was located about 525 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., heading on a west-northwesterly course.

Today's weather

Fair through the weekend

forecasts Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Northside areas:

Mostly fair through Saturday. Highs in the upper 70s to mid 80s both days and lows in the mid 40s to mid 50s Friday night. The pan evaporation is .26 inches Friday and Saturday. The haying outlook Sunday through Tuesday is for warm and dry Sunday, then a chance of showers and cooling late Monday and Tuesday.

Camas Prairie, Hailey and Upper Wood River Valley:

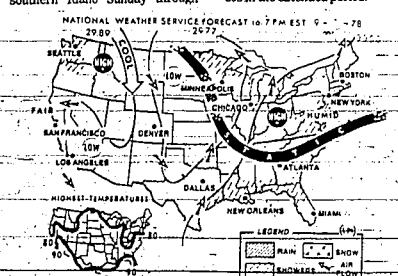

Mostly fair through Saturday. Highs in the upper 70s both days. The lows tonight in the upper 30s to low 40s.

Synopsis:

Scattered thunder showers which moved over southern Idaho late Wednesday produced only scattered light precipitation in lower valleys. On Thursday showers and thundershowers were confined mainly to the northern panhandle and the extreme eastern mountains of southeastern Idaho.

Fair to partly cloudy skies prevailed over the remainder of southerrn Idaho. Highs on Thursday were generally in the upper 70s to lower 80s in southern valleys but were only in the 60s and 70s in the cloudy showery northern region.

High pressure building at higher levels is expected to maintain mostly fair weather in the southern Idaho area through the weekend. Under this pattern daytime highs will also warm slightly for the next few days. The extended outlook for southern Idaho Sunday through Tuesday calls for mostly dry and warm Sunday then a chance of scattered showers and cooler late Monday and Tuesday. Highs upper 70s and 80s Sunday and Monday lowering to the 70s and low 80s by Tuesday. Lows mid 40s to upper 50s in the extended period.

Prices fall for food

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Raw food prices — the cost of farm commodities before they head to consumers — dropped another 3 percent in the month ending Aug. 15, the government announced Thursday.

It was the second consecutive monthly decrease after a series of price hikes, and it still left farmers' prices 20 percent above a year ago.

The Agriculture Department said lower prices for broilers, corn, potatoes, cattle and apples contributed most to the month's decrease.

Higher prices for hogs, milk and eggs partially offset the decreases.

The report by the department's Crop Reporting Board followed an announcement that supermarket prices fell 0.4 percent during July, the first decline since July 1977. During the last six months food prices at home have go up 7.1 percent.

The fall in supermarket prices helped the Consumer Price Index to show only a 0.5 percent monthly increase in July, smallest since December 1977.

Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters the decline "does confirm our views that economic growth would slow in the third quarter" while not foreshadowing a worsening of the economy.

Nevadans love their beer

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Wisconsin may lead the nation in beer production, but it takes fourth place to the tiny states of Nevada, New Hampshire and Montana in gulping the suds.

Statistics released Thursday by the U.S. Brewers Association in Washington showed beer consumption in Nevada averaged 36 gallons per person during 1977, followed by 32.7 gallons in New Hampshire and 31.3 gallons in Montana.

Wisconsin's 31 gallons per person — more than 4.6 million barrels of beer was was consumed in the brewery capital of America — ranked slightly ahead of another little populated state, Wyoming, with 30.5 gallons per person.

Wisconsin breweries turned out 24,772,814 barrels of beer last year, down from the 25,558,164 of the year before.

BLM lands cataloged for eastern Nevada

RENO (UPI) — A study of key oil and gas exploration areas on public land in eastern Nevada eliminated all but two of 72 roadless areas from further consideration as possible wilderness, the Bureau of Land Management reported Thursday.

The BLM study covered about 1.5 million acres, only a small percentage of the total Nevada public lands that will be studied as potential wilderness under the 1964 Wilderness Act.

Dave Harmon, BLM state wilderness coordinator, said of the 72 roadless areas evaluated in Elko, Eureka, Nye, Lander and White Pine counties, two covering about 23,000 acres in Elko County will be considered as wilderness study areas. The remaining acres were determined not to have any wilderness potential and will be open to oil and gas drilling. Congress will make the final decison on whether the two areas eventually are designated as wilderness.

Because of the increasing interest in oil and gas development in Nevada, the BLM conducted this early study before completion of wilderness evaluation procedures that were the subject of public meetings around the state this summer.

"We felt it was critical these high interest oil and gas exploration areas be reviewed as quickly as possible so exploration efforts would not be held up waiting for the wilderness inventory," he said. "So far, we've been successful and not one drilling request has been delayed due to the wilderness program."

He said the BLM's study findings are open for public comment until Oct. 1. He said the bureau is basically seeking the public's opinion on whether the wilderness characteristics for each roadless area were evaluated adequately.

The secret of Saturn's rings may be found in some odd ice

©N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — An exotic form of ice discovered several years ago has turned out to be the probable key to a mystery that has puzzled astronomers for centuries — the fact that the famous rings of the planet Saturn vary greatly in brilliance.

In companion papers just published in the prestigious journals Science and Nature, the American astrophysicist Roman Smoluchowski describes his hypothesis, based on recent laboratory studies, to account for a number of puzzling characteristics of Saturn's rings.

In a telephone interview with Dr. Smoluchowski in his laboratory at the Austin campus of the University of Texas, he said he had become aware only two years ago of a kind of water ice called amorphous ice.

The ice known to ordinary people, whether they encounter it in mountain glaciers, at the South Pole or in their refrigerators, is crystalline. Its molecules of water always sort themselves out in an orderly framework that builds up into a crystalline structure.

But the newly discovered amorphous ice (which to a casual observer looks exactly the same as ordinary ice) has no crystalline structure. Its molecules are all dumped together randomly.

A striking difference between amorphous and crystalline ice, Dr. Smoluchowski said, is the fact that ordinary ice conducts heat about 100 times more readily than amorphous ice. This fact may have crucial importance in the structure of Saturn's three visible rings.

The reason amorphous ice is not commonly known on earth is that it can form only at temperatures well below minus 100 degrees celsius, and must be condensed very slowly from single water molecules landing on a condensing surface. If conditions are not just right, the ice that condenses is the ordinary crystalline form.

Ice has long been known to be the principle visible constituent of Saturn's rings. The rings are currently thought to be made up of myriads of chunks about the size of a fist, made either of solid ice or ice-coated rock, whirling around the planet, which is the second largest in the solar system.

The strange rings extend 86,557 miles from the surface of Saturn, but are thought to be only a mile or so thick. The outer A Ring, which is only moderately bright, is separated by a 3,107-mile gap from the middle B Ring, which is the most brilliant part of the whole system of Saturn, including its rings and 11 moons.

The great question has been this: If the rings are made of essentially the same material, why should they differ so greatly in brilliance?

According to Dr. Smoluchowski's theory, which he says should be verifiable by future observations from spacecraft, radiation pressure from the sun strikes the outermost A Ring of Saturn, knocking molecules of water in ionized form off the whirling chuncks of matter inward toward the planet.

The ions of hydrogen and oxygen are thus transformed into an invisible wind that crosses the gap between the A and B Rings (known as Cassini's Division) and then condenses in the form of amorphous ice on the particles in the B Ring.

All the chunks of matter in the rings are old, probably dating from the time the primordial matter of the solar system condensed to form a planetary system. They have thus had time to get very dirty, Dr. Smoluchowski reasons, by sweeping up the clouds of dust that drift through the solar system.

As the outer ring loses water molecules, the dirt and dust mixed with its ice particles continues to dull their luster. But surface ice, probably in amorphous form, is continuously deposited on particles in the B Ring, thus keeping their surfaces bright and reflective, Dr. Smoluchowski believes.

Amorphous ice may explain why the particles in Saturn's rings have not been ground down to microscopic motes of dust over the eons, he said.

Since the particles whirling around Saturn must be in frequent collision with each other, it could be supposed that eventually they would grind each other down like grains of sand. But the particles seem, according to analysis of the light they reflect toward the earth, to remain relatively large.

This would happen if, when small particles collide, they could join together.

When two small particles of ordinary ice collide, their energy of motion is converted into heat, but the heat thus produced is rapidly dispersed, because of the high heat conductivity of crystalline ice.

But in the case of amorphous ice, Dr. Smoluchowski said, the heat would not be conducted away from the point of impact nearly so fast, and ice would melt at the spot, causing the particles to join.

The role of amorphous ice may force astronomers to take a new look at theories as to how galaxies and stars condensed from the primordial cosmic matter, he said.

Carter resumes his campaign for passage of natural gas bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday urged governors and business leaders to "put the interests of your country first" and support passage of the compromise natural gas bill, saying its defeat could be crippling to America's economic health and international standing.

Lobbying hard for the keystone energy legislation on his first day home from vacation, Carter got encouraging assessments from top aides and a majority of the visiting governors on prospects for Senate approval of the gas bill.

In the second of two meetings with White House guests, he summed up his message bluntly to a group of business, farm and state legislative leaders, saying, "I need your help."

Noting that gas industry and consumer advocate groups have joined forces to oppose the gas price deregulation proposal, he said foreign nations consider the issue "a test of our national will" to enact an effective energy conservation policy.

"If Congress should reject this legislation, that would be a devastating blow to the character and esteem with which our government is held," he said.

"Every time there is a doubt about whether energy legislation will be completed this year, the value of the dollar goes down and international uncertainty increases. Inflation is directly tied to the value of the dollar ...

"There is no way I can deal, even with the power and prestige of the presidency, with an issue so sharply divided, so controversial, without the help of responsible citizens like yourselves."

Press secretary Jody Powell said Carter received an "encouraging assessment" at a strategy meeting with top aides, including Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and congressional lobbyist Frank Moore, while acknowledging "it will be a difficult fight."

"We may win, or we may not," Powell told reporters. "I think the odds are that we will win.

"We have significantly more committed votes than the opposition, but neither side has enough votes to lock it up."

Powell said Carter was pleased that a "majority" of the governors he saw later supported the compromise after he delivered an emotional appeal for their help.

Weddington will press her views

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Feminist attorney Sarah Weddington, President Carter's choice to succeed the outspoken Midge Costanza, said Thursday she will press her views "within the administration" and back Carter's policy decisions like a team player in public.

The White House formally confirmed Thursday that Carter had chosen Ms. Weddington to the advisory post vacated by Ms. Costanza, who resigned — but at a lower salary and with duties apparently more limited than her predecessor originally had.

White House officials said she will assume the post of "special assistant to the president" at a salary of $51,000, and stressed that her duties would focus chiefly on womens' issues and ratification of the Equal Righs Amendment.

Ms. Costanza had the higher protocol rank of "assistant to the president," made $58,000 and originally performed liaison with a wide variety of special interest and minority groups. Toward the end of her service, however, her duties were cut back to focus chiefly on feminist issues.

Both Ms. Costanza and other womens' rights leaders hailed Carter's choice, with Ms. Costanza describing Ms. Weddington as "someone who would complete the work I started."

Ms. Weddington, 33, currently general counsel to the Agriculture Department and formerly a Texas state legislator from Abilene, gained national prominence as the lawyer who won the Supreme Court's landmark 1973 decision liberalizing the laws governing abortion.

She also supports federal funding for abortions — a view not shared by Carter — but said in a telephone interview such differences will not reduce her ability to serve the president.

Pay raises to be limited

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter announced Thursday he will make an example of 3.5 million military personnel and white collar government workers by holding their pay raises to 5.5 percent — nearly 3 percent less than recommended.

Stressing his fight against inflation, Carter said he was rejecting the recommendation of a federal advisory committee for an increase of 8.4 percent that would have brought government employees more in line with those in private industry.

In a message to Congress, Carter said that he is submitting the 5.5 percent raise to "allow the federal government to set an example for labor and industry and lead the fight against inflation by example, and not just words alone."

Carter previously urged unions and private employers to try to hold wage hikes to the 5.5 percent figure.

Ever wonder why no mustard on a Big Mac?

Dianne Hagaman/Times-News

©Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — Like countless other Americans, H. David Bishop recently went into a McDonald's and order a Big Mac.

Unlike most of his fellow Americans, Bishop said: "I'd like mustard on that."

"I'm sorry," he was told, "but we don't put mustard on a Big Mac."

Bishop expressed amazement, and asked to speak to the manager. The manager said that yes, mustard is never put on a Big Mac.

Still not believing that he could be refused mustard on a hamburger, Bishop asked if he could have it in writing. The manager sat down and wrote out a statement saying that it is contrary to "McDonald's Rules and Policies" to put mustard on a Big Mac.

Bishop then passed on this document to me, asking if this could be true.

I have to admit that I didn't know about this mustard policy. I have ordered a Big Mac only once, while desperately hungry during a long auto trip. I took one bite and tossed the rest away. It had some kind of slop on it, which, I'm told is called a "Special Sauce." I don't know what makes it special, except for tasting so bad.

At Bishop's request, I called McDonald's regional headquarters and asked why a person can't get mustard on a Big Mac.

Believe this or not, the question was too big for the regional office. I was referred to the corporate communications division of the national corporate headquarters.

The executive in charge of that division was in conference, but his aide offered to help.

Why can't a person get mustard on a Big Mac?

"This is a matter of corporate policy. We cannot add any additional elements to a sandwich."

Why not?

"We can delete items but we cannot add items. Basically, the integral part of the sandwich cannot be altered by adding to it."

But why?

"It is just the way the Big Mac is set up."

That answer doesn't satisfy consumer Bishop, who said: "It has always seemed to me that the hamburger is an American invention that dates back to the early 1900s. It has always been a relatively humble and simple product that consists primarily of a bun, a piece of meat, and yellow mustard. There are other versions with tomatoes, pickles and onions, etc., but it is of great concern to me when corporate policy starts dictating and/or changing traditional taste patterns in America."

I have to disagree. As bad as I think the Big Mac tastes, it is McDonald's right to make it taste that way and it is the right of any American to abuse his own taste buds with it.

The people who run McDonald's know what they are doing, so I'm sure that before they began selling Big Macs, they tested ad sampled and tested and sampled until they had just the right awful taste that would sell sensationally.

They probably know that if they added mustard, it might improve the taste, which could make it less popular.

I happen to believe that a classic hamburger must be accompanied by onions, either sliced raw or fried, a slice of vine-ripened tomato, some mustard, tart dill pickles on the side, and should be washed down with at least two steins of a good imported beer, followed by three shots of bar whisky.

Not everyone agrees with my definition of a classic hamburger. I have an elderly aunt, for example, who prefers ketchup to mustard, and instead of the bar whisky, she favors a half pint of Southern Comfort.

While I disagree with her, and we've debated this point many times, I would defend her right to have the hamburger of her choice.

We still have a free choice in this society. While millions of people seem to prefer the mass produced plasti-burgers of McDonald's and other fast food outlets, a person doesn't have to go along with the herd instinct. Someone with a bold, independent spirit and a more highly developed sense of cuisine can still find countless diners and taverns that serve one variation or another of the classic hamburger.

Only a few steps from where I work is a new high-rise apartment building with a McDonald's on the first floor. It does a booming business. All day, the high-rise creatures scurry in and out, stoking up on plasti-calories that they can work off on the jogging track.

Fine. I would no more deny them their Big Mac than I would deny them the right to eat this page, which, with a dash or two of the McDonald Special Sauce, would probably taste the same.

But for those who want to walk an extra half block, there is a tavern run by a Greek immigrant who makes hamburgers on a grill. You put on your own mustard, onion, pickles, ketchup and everything else in quantities of your choice. They are excellent hamburgers if you tell him to "hold the hair."

His specialty is something he calls the "doubla chiz," which, translated from Greek, means "double cheese." And he will also make any variation you can think of, such as adding a hunk of grilled salami to the doobla chiz, or a fillet of fish to the salami. Anything you want. It is the thinking man's hamburger joint.

The two places coexist, and so do their customers.

Those who have been reared since childhood on the modern diet of plastic wrapped additives and chemicals can lather their lips with the corporate Special Sauce.

The rest of us are free to go to the tavern and indulge our taste for nature's honest, wholesome natural foods and flavors.

What's in store for downtown?

TWIN FALLS — Judy Baxter, co-owner of Judy's Books, always wanted to open a shop on the downtown mall.

Baxter considers the downtown mall "the place" to open a retail business in Twin Falls, and thus the Magic Valley, as Twin Falls is the place to shop in the Magic Valley.

On the other hand, Richard Webster, owner of American Waterbeds, can't wait to move his shop off the mall.

The conflicting opinions held by these two Twin Falls business owners is typical of the lack of consensus among Twin Falls businessmen about what Twin Falls' business future, and the future of the downtown mall, will be.

Clouding future prospects is the imminent opening of the Blue Lakes Shopping Center Mall.

The coming of the new mall gives the Blue Lakes North area, from the Lynwood Shopping Center, to the new mall, north to Ernst and the Newton's and Blue Lakes Sporting Goods area, a variety to rival that of the downtown mall.

Downtown businessmen like John Roper insist the downtown mall will thrive despite increased competition from the new mall. Roper cites the fact that the downtown mall has more shops, more selection and more to do than the new shopping center will have.

But the confident predictions of downtown merchants cannot hide the concern evidenced by meetings like the one held yesterday to work out a collective strategy for combatting the new competition from the north side of town.

And the parking shortage plaguing the downtown mall reduces the convenience of shopping there, to say nothing of the torn up streets, fortunately a temporary situation.

Downtown merchants play up the convenience of one-stop shopping, but for modern consumers, whose distaste for walking and demand for convenience are notorious, it is not now significantly quicker, or easier, to shop downtown than to shop Blue Lakes.

Is it harder to find a parking place downtown and then walk from store to store than it is to drive from parking lot to parking lot along Blue Lakes?

For now, the downtown mall is thriving.

Baxter said she wanted a location on the downtown mall ever since she first had the idea to open a store. She couldn't find one initially, but as soon as one became available, she jumped on it.

Selling books requires the kind of drop-in business that occurs on the downtown mall, she explained.

Webster, however, who needs customers who are prepared to make major purchases, said drop in customers who have no intention of buying merely consume his employees' time. The continuous flow of curious but essentially uninterested passers-by has prompted Webster to leave the downtown mall.

He is moving his business to Blue Lakes Boulevard North, but not into the new mall. Webster said in his new location next to Newton's Sports he will know that people who come into his store will be interested in buying a waterbed.

Webster pointed out that his customers will be able to find his new store easily, and park right in front, something rarely possible downtown.

Webster and Baxter both considered moving into the new Blue Lakes Mall, but both decided against it because they felt the rent, utilities, and maintenance costs plus the percentage of gross profits required by the mall was too much to pay.

Baxter said she concluded that a small business owner going into the new mall would find himself in the position where "you're not working for yourself anymore."

Apparently, a lot of other small business owners in Twin Falls felt the same way.

Don Jensen of Jensen's Jewelers is the only local businessmen thus far to decide to open a store in the new Blue Lakes mall. And Jensen is going to keep his store on the downtown mall open.

Jensen, who owns stores in shopping centers in other towns, said the new mall will see a more casual kind of customer. "The difference I feel is that people almost revert to the old days when they window shopped. People come to spend time and there's a lot of browsing. Downtown they come in with a purpose. People don't come downtown to look around. They come downtown to buy things," he explained. He added the new mall would have a "more relaxed atmosphere," due in part to the fact that people are less conscious of time in a covered mall with constant light.

And the advantages of a covered mall in the winter are obvious.

Jensen said he thinks there's plenty of business for both malls, but if what Jensen said is true, with the coming of the new mall, the Blue Lakes area may rival downtown in comfort as well as in variety.

The downtown area has always dominated the retail trade scene in Twin Falls. Webster said he never even considered any place other than the downtown area or Blue Lakes North.

To hold their share of the market, downtown merchants will have to solve their parking problem and continue to improve the variety available in their area by continuing to expand the mall.

Whatever steps downtown merchants take to meet the challenge of the new mall, Magic Valley consumers stand to profit most.

Like it or not, downtown merchants must realize the Blue Lakes Mall is only the first in a series of challenges they will have to face.

A burgeoning consumer population attracted the outside money which built the new mall, and the outside stores which are filling it up.

In the time-tested scenario of urban growth, new people are followed by new stores, which improve services, which attract new industries, which need more people, who want more stores....

How odd, Senate nixed a building

©1978 N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Just before leaving for its summer recess (actually, a campaigning break), the House of Representatives in a rare show of independence and common sense refused by 245 to 153 to approve another $54 million for the Senate's grandiose third office building, now under construction on Constitution Avenue.

The common sense was as plain as the independence was unusual. The latest Senatorial monstrosity was projected to cost $47.9 million when it was conceived in someone's Coleridge-like dream in 1972; by the time the House rose up in unprecedented wrath to smite the spendthrifts of "the other body," $85 million had been appropriated, $16 million spent and a nine-story steel skeleton erected, about the right size to house another famous gasbag, the Goodyear blimp.

The Senate itself, casting uneasy glances over its shoulder at the taxpayers, has put a limit of $135 million on its latest erection. To some realists, this hedge smacks of the national debt ceiling; they predict that something like $200 million will yet go down the drains of the more than 100 private Senatorial bathrooms projected for the new Xanadu.

The Senate might well ponder the fact that only in the most extreme circumstances would the House — which seldom hesitates to indulge itself at taxpayers' expense — interfere with anybody's assumed Congressional prerogatives. But don't count on the Senate reacting sensibly; Time Magazine reports that Majority Leader Robert Byrd has already delivered an ultimatum, couching it in an awesome series of the kind of clichés indigenous to Congressional oratory: "When we get into the business of tit for tat, it could go from bad to worse."

Don't count on the House standing fast, either. Suppose the Senate retaliated by refusing to vote funds for some of those sweet election perks with which House members have virtually built themselves into their seats? the same privileges — like mobile office-campaign vans for each Congressional district, at taxpayers' expense — mean less to senators, who only have to run for office every six years and campaign mostly on television anyway. (Come to think of it, maybe "the business of tit for tat" would be a break for the taxpayers; and wouldn't it be better for all if members of Congress had to pay $4 for a haircut and wait on elevators like the rest of us?)

But back to Xanadu. Since there now are 100 senators and only two mammoth office buildings for them, the elephantine new one, naturally, will have suites for 50 senators, each with two of the aforementioned private johns. This will leave, one assumes, 25 senators for each of the other two buildings — just one of which, for years, was sufficient for all 96 senators then numbered in the world's greatest deliberative body.

Apologists for this doubling — which is what it amounts to — of the Senatorial paramaters say the new building is necessary because the Senate staff has tripled since the Everett Dirksen Building (an overblown rambler like the late Wizard of Ooze himself) was completed in the fifties under the opulent aegis of Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson.

This rationale, like most of Washington, has surface plausibility concealing a hollow interior. Was a tripling of the Senate staff needed? Was it authorized by any general concensus of the American people, who are fondly described in most political speechifying as fed up with bureaucracy?

Even if the answer to the first question is "yes" and to the second "at least by inference," are the 16-foot ceilings, $1.5 million teak and cherry-wood paneling and the special TV anchorman booths in the hearing rooms designed for staff? Who is going to use the new gymnasium, which is reputedly twice the size of the gyms already provided in each of the other two SOBs — Bob Byrd's secretary?

The rooftop tennis court and the rooftop restaurant hardly seem necessary results of staff expansion. And if it's argued that the government ought to build marble palaces rather than plastic tenements, it should be replied that the Capitol, the White House and the Cabinet buildings are enough; Senate staff could get along with lower-cost quarters.

On the other hand, the planned atrium with an Alexander Calder sculpture may show some advance in Congressional culture, which used to be exemplified by Virginia Rep. Howard Smith's description of what he wanted for a Theodore Roosevelt memorial — "a statute of a man carrying a big stick."

On the whole, however, the new Senate pleasure dome is a dubious honor for the Senator after whom it is to be named — the late Philip Hart of Michigan, a simple and unpretentious man of unusual moral force who might now from heaven be reflecting ironically on those "caverns measureless to man" through which Coleridge's Kubla heard "ancestral voices prophesying war!"

Perhaps more to the point, in the era of much hypocrisy about Proposition 13, bloated government and the will of the people, the Senate is here showing its true contempt for taxpayers, public thrift and republican virtue — not to mention pious Republican pledges of a 30 percent tax cut. The House's uncharacteristic demurrer notwithstanding — and it probably won't — we seem to be seeing, as Herblock put it in a recent cartoon, more and more of "government of Congress, by Congress and for Congress."

$2 bill will hang in there

By DONALD F. GRAFF

Disposing of $1.294 billion is ordinarily no problem for your average federal agency.

But it's currently a big one for the U.S. Treasury, with that much sunk into $2 bills which, as far as most Americans are concerned, it can keep.

It all dates back to 1976 when the two, withdrawn from circulation 38 years earlier, was re-introduced. It then looked like a denomination whose inflationary time had come. The old reliable one was losing the battle to escalating prices on small items. A $2 alternative, so the thinking went, would be more convenient for consumers and business alike. And, since fewer bills would have to be issued, the Treasury would save itself several millions in printing costs.

As it has turned out, the two had everything going for it except public acceptance. The Treasury has printed 647 million in two years, but the denomination is still virtually uncirculated. Some have disappeared into collections. But the bulk remains in reserve or with banks where, according to tellers' reports, customers are as likely as not to refuse to accept twos when offered.

The Treasury still isn't sure precisely what went wrong, but has a number of theories.

The established heavy traffic in $20 bills could be a factor, with the public preferring not to take the chance of confusing the smaller denomination with the familiar big bill.

Superstition may also be at work. The old $2 bill was widely considered to be unlucky, possibly through its association with betting. The taint, supposedly removed by tearing a corner, may have been carried over to the new issue by a long-memoried public which nowadays prefers its currency unmutilated.

Cuba and U.S. aren't getting that close

By J. PAUL WYATT

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — A year ago today the United States and Cuba opened "interest sections" in their respective capitals — their first direct, diplomatic contact in 15 years.

Tensions between the two countries separated by 90 miles of the Florida Straits were easing in 1977 and there were rumors that other diplomatic breakthroughs were imminent.

But one year after 10 American diplomats moved into the old U.S. embassy on Havana's Malecon and 10 Cubans set up shop in the Czech Embassy in Washington, unbending ideological differences have halted any further rapprochement.

The two nation's irreconcilability was demonstrated most clearly last spring when Cuba poured troops into Angola and Ethiopia, leading President Carter to protest Cuban meddling in Africa's internal affairs.

Lyle Lane, head of the U.S. interest section in Havana, has formally met only once with Cuban President Fidel Castro, and that was on May 19 when Castro called him in to deny Cuban troops took part in the invasion by Katangese irregulars of Zaire's Shaba province.

The Castro-Lane conversation was leaked to an American reporter in Washington — further straining relations.

"While the past year has shown that serious problems remain in the path of improving relations between the United States and Cuba," Lane told UPI during a recent visit to Havana, "the year has also shown that the establishment of interest sections has been of value.

"The interest sections — the Cuban office in Washington and the U.S. office in Havana — provide channels for official communication and, on our part, the interest section provides a means to protect the interests of U.S. citizens (in Cuba)."

One of the U.S. interest section's first accomplishments was repatriating two planeloads of U.S. citizens from Cuba. About 200 others left Cuba for the United States in smaller groups or individually.

A month ago, the Cuban ministry of foreign relations approved the first list of dual (Cuban-American) citizens allowed to leave Cuba. There are about 500 families of dual nationals, and the Cuban list reportedly includes a "very generous" family nucleus.

Since the opening of the U.S. interest section, there has been an almost constant flow of congressional delegations, newsmen, businessmen, world affairs councils, university groups and tourists to Cuba.

The largest congressional mission was the 40-member House Banking committee, chaired by Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., which descended on Havana Dec. 29 and stayed until New Year's Day. Smaller congressional groups have visited the Caribbean island at Cuba's behest.

Unlike some other Communist countries, however, U.S. diplomats do not live in a diplomatic compound.

Cuba to release prisoners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cuba will let up to 1,000 past and present political prisoners seek asylum in the United States, and Washington has agreed to start screening an initial group of applicants, U.S. officials announced Thursday.

They said the first group of 48 might include "one or two" Bay of Pigs invasion veterans as well as anti-Castro and anti-communist Cuban dissidents.

The gesture by the Fidel Castro regime, greeted cautiously in Washington, appears to be an effort to improve U.S.-Cuban relations by meeting one of President Carter's central demands — the release of political captives.

U.S. officials stressed, however, that the United States has offered nothing in return and there is no guarantee all the would-be immigrants will be accepted.

"The U.S. government welcomes this step by Cuba which it regards as a favorable development in the area of human rights," State Department spokesman Ken Brown said.

Bikini coconuts, once the pride of the island, are now too radioactive to eat

Bikini natives say good-bye

BIKINI, U.S. Trust Territory (UPI) — Clutching their children and coconut baskets of food in their arms, the people of Bikini Thursday tearfully sailed away, many for the last time, from a paradise island home poisoned by radiation.

The U.S. Trust Territory vessel MS Micro-Pilot whistled a salute as it slipped out of Bikini lagoon, carrying most of the 139 islanders to an uncertain future 500 miles away on Kili Island, which many of them call "The Prison." A few stayed behind to complete loading of a cargo ship.

"I have confidence in the U.S. government," said islander Johnny Johnson, 30. "I believe they will do the same thing as we did — sacrifice for this island as we have sacrificed our beloved Bikini for them."

It was the second time in 32 years the islanders had been forced to leave the sandy tropical Pacific atoll 2,500 miles southwest of Hawaii which their people have called home for centuries. In 1946, they were resettled so the United States could use their island for nuclear testing.

After a decade-long effort to clean up the radiation they were permitted to return starting in 1968, but a new survey found that dangerous radiation still lingered and the U.S. government ordered them moved again.

As the loading progressed Wednesday, boxes, bundles, and suitcases streamed down to the beach. Bikini women in bright, bell-sleeved dresses waited for the small motor boat to carry them to the Micro-Pilot.

Some had their possessions wrapped Micronesian style in pandanus mats tied with string. Some carried woven coconut baskets with food cooked for the trip to Kili.

Every woman also carried a child. Ireno Capelle carried her young baby girl, the last child born on Bikini, delivered just two days earlier.

"I have hope in my heart. I think I will be back soon," Johnson said before boarding the Micro-Pilot. But scientists said it would decades or longer before the radiation which has poisoned the ground, the fresh water and the coconuts that are the mainstay of their diet is gone.

Fugitive is sought

WOODLAND, N.C. (UPI) — An "exceedingly dangerous" fugitive wanted for murder and rape was sought in two states Thursday in the disappearnce of a 17-year-old girl who dropped from sight while on her way to the post office.

Officials said Norris C. Taylor, 34, who fled the Johnston County jail July 12, was believed to have abducted Pattie Bazemore around 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Taylor, who also goes by the alias of Tom Gatlin and James Russell, was being held for trial on charges of murder of a 30-year-old New York model, Kathleen Ann Munsolo, at a motel in Selma when he escaped.

William and Emily Harris plead guilty to the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst — OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — William and Emily Harris, showing no remorse, defiantly pleaded guilty Thursday to kidnapping Patricia Hearst four and a half years ago.

"We feel no remorse, and in fact we're proud of it," Harris, 33, told spectators in the courtroom, who greeted him with applause.

The surprise pleas, the result of plea bargaining with the Alameda County district attorney's office, were the latest in the bizarre series of events which began the night of Feb. 4, 1974, when Miss Hearst, then 19, was carried screaming from the apartment she shared with her then-fiance, Steven Weed.

Harris had been identified by Miss Hearst as one of two men who burst into the apartment, beat her fiance and carried her away. Mrs. Harris, 31, was identified as the driver of one of two getaway cars.

Six other persons accused in the kidnapping died in a Los Angeles shootout with police in June, 1974.

The Harrises pleaded guilty to four counts: kidnapping Miss Hearst, kidnapping another man whose car was used in the abduction, robbing Weed, and false imprisonment. The charges carry sentences of up to life in prison, but it is possible the Harrises could be eligible for parole in 1983 or 1984.

Originally, the Harrises faced 13 counts with a maximum sentence of life without the possibility of parole. Superior Court Judge Stanley P. Golde set sentencing for Oct. 3.

The case grabbed the attention of the world as the group of abductors, who called themselves the "Symbionese Liberation Army," issued a series of communiques over the next two months making a series of demands from Miss Hearst's parents which included a $70 million free food program for the poor.

The case took a stunning turn when Miss Hearst announced that she had decided to stay with her captors, then participated in a bank robbery with them. Miss Hearst now is serving a seven-year prison term for the robbery.

Miss Hearst and the Harrises were arrested in San Francisco on the same day 19 months after the kidnapping. They apparently were together nearly the entire time they were underground.

The Harrises have been in jail since their arrest and are serving a sentence for participating with Miss Hearst in a shoplifting and shooting incident at a Los Angeles sporting goods store. Miss Hearst was placed on probation in the same case.

At the conclusion of the formal court proceeding Thursday, Harris casually sat on the corner of the defense table and gave a six-minute speech.

Woman guilty in venom case

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Charlotte Durfee, a dark-eyed, blonde divorcee, was convicted Thursday of hiring a mild-mannered former college teacher to try to kill her millionaire ex-husband with cobra venom.

"I was in love with her and thought she was in love with me," Miles Durfee, 74, her ex-husband said. "I have no malice whatsoever. I don't want to see her hurt."

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered for Mrs. Durfee, 47, who stood quietly as the jury announced its verdict after 90 minutes of deliberation. She faces a maximum of 30 years in prison.

Police said Mrs. Durfee hired Lorer Moore, 47, of Milton, to kill Durfee, a Janesville businessman who divorced her on grounds of adultery.

Australia says no to Nixon's plans

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — The Australian government Thursday put a snag in Richard Nixon's foreign travel plans by saying a planned visit by the former president to that country in late September would come at an "awkward" time.

A government spokesman said Nixon's Washington staff approached the Australian Embassy last week about a visit to Canberra "and meeting Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser and Foreign Minister Andrew Peacock."

Nixon, who returned to the American political arena last weekend by hosting a Republican fund-raising party, is planning to visit a number of foreign countries in the near future.

'My next act . . .'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace has hired Celebrity Management Co., a Nashville management and booking agency, to represent him when he leaves office in January.

Firm President Bob Bray said Thursday, "Gov. Wallace will not be engaged in a show business career because he is leaving the door open for a political future.

"But while he's not in office, he intends on maintaining a high profile."

'Just visiting'

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Former White House counsel John Dean, whose testimony helped run Richard Nixon from the presidency, returned to Fort Holabird prison, now empty, where he was held four years ago for his part in the Watergate scandal.

Dean, a technical adviser to Time-Life Films, was accompanied by technicians and producers on Wednesday's tour to discuss the filming of a TV mini-series based on his book, "Blind Ambition" and his wife Maureen's memoirs, "Mo."

No news, good news

LONDON (UPI) — W. Carl Jackson, an Indiana University dean, is expected to complete his solo trans-Atlantic crossing in a 30-foot ketch by Sept. 4, although no one knows just where he is.

Roy Scott, a Royal Thames Yacht Club member coordinating Jackson's voyage in Britain, said Jackson, 55, could reach Southampton by the weekend, but "most likely he won't arrive until next week."

Neither Scott nor the Coast Guard has had direct contact with Jackson. A spokesman at the Coast Guard's headquarters in Shoreham by the Sea said they would not become worried unless he does not arrive by Sept. 4.

Compromise reached at chess tournament

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — Champion and challenger agreed Thursday to resume the World Chess championship after each made a compromise to end their feud over tinted eyeglasses and where a Soviet hypnotist should sit.

The settlement was contained in a joint communique prepared by representatives of Soviet world champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Victor Korchnoi.

The streets of New York seem to be a bit cleaner

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sanitation Commissioner Anthony Vaccarello said Thursday New Yorkers can hold their heads high again — the new dog poop law is working.

A smiling Vaccarello stood on a pristine, poop-less section of city street to issue the "encouraging" news that the month-old "pooper scooper" law has resulted in visibly cleaner streets and parks.

"I am encouraged by the results thus far," Vaccarello said as canine owners strolled by him into Central Park with their plastic sandwich bags and newspapers ready to use as "pooper scoopers."

"No longer do pedestrians have to tap dance around dog droppings in many sections of this city," he said.

More punch for fewer Soviet warheads

LONDON (UPI) — The United States could fire more than twice as many nuclear warheads as the Soviets in case of war but Russia's atomic weapons pack a greater punch, the International Institute for Strategic Studies said today.

The Institute, an independent international center for information and research on problems of security, defense and control in the nuclear age, also said the military balance in Europe is "moving steadily against the West."

The observations were part of the agency's annual "military balance" survey.

The Institute said the United States could launch more than 11,000 warheads — compared with 4,500 the Soviets could fire against the United States.

But the Soviet total will soar to more than 7,500 in the early 1980s and "its individual warheads have significantly higher yields than U.S. ones," the Institute said.

The agency said that as far as ground forces go in Europe, the Communists have a much greater number of troops, tanks and guns than do North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces and that NATO superiority in quality of weapons is diminishing.

"The advent of new weapons systems, "particularly precision guided munitions and new antitank and air defense missiles, may again cut into the Warsaw Pact's advantage in tank and aircraft numbers, but in general, the pattern is one of a military balance moving steadily against the West," the report said.

Noting that NATO at its summit meeting in Washington in May produced a long term defense program designed to offset this Soviet superiority in numbers, the Institute said it is too early to say whether it will be effective.

But it gave this assessment of the current East-West balance of forces in Europe:

• "The overall balance still appears to make military aggression seem unattractive."

• "NATO has emphasized quality, particularly in equipment and training to offset numbers, but this is now being matched."

• "While an overall balance can be said to exist today, the Warsaw Pact appears more content with the relationship of forces than is NATO."

On the sea, "there is little doubt that Soviet naval forces now pose a threat to NATO," the report said, although in a war lasting more than 30 days the West probably could establish control of the oceans.

LEGAL NOTICE

ORDINANCE NO. 78-1

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF HOLLISTER, IDAHO, RELATING TO THE MUNICIPAL WATER SYSTEM; CREATING THE WATER DEPARTMENT OF THE CITY OF HOLLISTER; PRESCRIBING REGULATIONS FOR HOOKING UP AND OBTAINING SERVICE FROM THE MUNICIPAL WATER SYSTEM; ESTABLISHING RULES GOVERNING THE INSTALLATION OF FACILITIES FOR SERVICE FROM THE SYSTEM; REGULATING THE OPERATION OF THE MUNICIPAL WATER SYSTEM; PRESCRIBING FEES, CHARGES AND ACCOUNTING PROCEDURES FOR THE MUNICIPAL WATER SYSTEM; PROHIBITING CERTAIN CONDUCT THAT INTERFERES WITH EFFICIENT OPERATION OF THE WATER SYSTEM; PROVIDING FOR ENFORCEMENT OF THE PROVISIONS OF THIS ORDINANCE; REPEALING FROM THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THIS ORDINANCE ALL PRIOR CONFLICTING ORDINANCES; PROVIDING FOR SEVERABILITY OF THE PROVISIONS OF THIS ORDINANCE; AND PROVIDING WHEN THIS ORDINANCE SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF HOLLISTER:

SECTION 1: Creation of Water Department. There is hereby created a Water Department of the city of Hollister, Idaho, which shall consist of the Mayor and the City Clerk-Treasurer, together with such other persons as may from time to time be appointed by the Mayor.

SECTION 2: Hooking Up and Obtaining Service from the Municipal Water System.

A. Mandatory Hook-Up. In order to preserve the quantity and quality of water available to the municipal water system, and in order to insure adequate revenue which to defray the bond obligation and other costs incurred for improvements to and operations of the municipal water system, it is hereby provided that all owners of lots, properties, buildings, or residences which are within 1,000 feet of a main line of the municipal water system, and which are using or consuming water in any manner, shall construct or cause to be constructed a sufficient private service line to connect said lots, properties, buildings or residences to the nearest accessible mainline of the municipal water system within sixty (60) days after the effective date of this ordinance.

B. Application for Hook-Up and Service. No connection to the municipal water system shall be established until the owner (or his duly authorized agent) of the lot, property, building or residence in question has submitted to the City Clerk an application for water hook-up and service, and until such owner (or agent) has demonstrated compliance with all applicable provisions of this ordinance.

(1) All applications for water hook-up and service shall be made at the office of the Water Department located in City Hall; and the applications shall set forth the name of the owner (or agent), building permit number if service is sought to a new or enlarged structure and such permit is required by law, size of connection requested, description of the property to be served, and signature of the owner (or agent) agreeing to conform to the rules and regulations of the Water Department as authorized or prescribed by ordinance. The occupant of property is presumed either to be the owner or such property or to be the owner's duly authorized agent; and unless or until contrary information is furnished in writing to the Water Department, the owner shall be bound by the actions and representations of such occupant.

(2) An application, containing the above information, shall be required for any change in a water hook-up, made at the request of the property owner (or agent); and the cost of such change shall be borne exclusively by said owner (or agent).

(3) If application is made for a connection that requires extension of water mains, either within or without the City, such application shall be referred by the Water Department to the City Council. The City Council shall determine whether the application shall be granted, and if granted, the terms and conditions upon which the extension shall be made. Provided, one such condition of the authorization of an extension shall be that the extended water main become and remain at all times the sole and exclusive property of the city, regardless of whether or not the cost of such extension was assumed and paid by the City.

C. Temporary Hook-Up and Water Service. Contractors and others who desire to use municipal water temporarily shall make the same application, pay the same charges, fees and deposits, and be subject to the same rules and regulations, as other users and consumers of water from the system.

D. Hook-Up Fee and Water Service Deposit. An application for water hook-up and service shall be accompanied by payment in cash, certified check or money order of the sum of $200.00 as the hook-up fee and a service deposit in the amount of two months' service charges for the property in question, according to the rates set forth elsewhere in this ordinance. The hook-up fee shall be retained by the city to defray the cost of reviewing the application, conducting such inspections as this ordinance or the circumstances of the proposed connection may require, opening the service account and other administrative actions. The water service deposit shall be subject to the disposition by the City Clerk/Treasurer as provided elsewhere in this ordinance.

E. Approval of Application. If an application is approved, notation of such approval shall be made and signed by the City Clerk/Treasurer upon a copy of the application returned to the applicant.

SECTION 3: Installation of Water Service Facilities.

A. Cost and Standards. All installations of connections with the municipal water system shall be made at the owner's (or agent's) expense and shall comply with the requirements set forth in applicable national plumbing codes and such other standards as are prescribed and adopted by the Idaho Code. The size of private service lines shall be reasonably prescribed by the Water Department.

B. Compliance with Standards. The City may, through its employees or persons or firms under contract to the City, inspect connections made to the municipal water system; and, if the Water Department gives notice to an applicant that such inspection will be made, the applicant shall not cover any pipeline or connection until the inspection is made and the work approved. Notwithstanding the provision in this subsection for inspections, any applicant or successor, who installs any pipeline or connection in a manner violative of the codes and standards specified above shall cause corrections to be made at his own expense promptly following demand by the Water Department.

C. Sewer Lines. From the effective date of this ordinance, no sewer line shall be laid less than six feet from any water system mainline or private service line.

D. Valve or Stop. A special valve or stop shall be installed on each private service line leading from the mainline into each property served; and no branch pipe, bib or fixture of any kind shall be connected to the pipe between the mainline connection and this valve or stop. The valve or stop shall be installed or approved by the Water Department, and shall be accessible to representatives of the Water Department at all times.

E. Depth of Lines. All private service lines shall be placed at the same level as the mainline. The Water Department may prescribe additional depth for such private service lines, when the terrain or other circumstances so require.

F. Separate Services. Each lot, property, building or residence using or consuming water shall be served by a separate private

Steel monitor system falters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American steel industry Thursday said the government's four-month-old system of monitoring foreign-made steel may be a failure because of excessive European imports.

Steel produced in Europe and sold in the United States soared to 748,000 tons last month, a 73 percent increase from the June level, making European nations the main supplier of imported steel.

This development has thrown the Treasury Department's so-called trigger price system into "chaos" and indicates the system may be "a failure," said Lewis Foy, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the American Iron and Steel Institute.

It was the strongest industry criticism yet of the steel monitoring system, begun May 1, that was devised by the administration to assist economically depressed American steel companies by halting the flood of low-priced steel imports.

Foy called on the Treasury to investigate European steel imports and to strengthen the overall trigger price system.

If no relief materializes, Foy said, "there is a very strong possibility" that Bethlehem will file a dumping complaint against the European nations, a move that would undermine — and possibly destroy — the trigger price system.

"We cannot in this country afford to continue losing markets to our foreign friends when they violate the law as they are right now," Foy said.

A Treasury spokesman said the government is "analyzing" the July import figures. No decision has been made on whether a special investigation is required, he said.

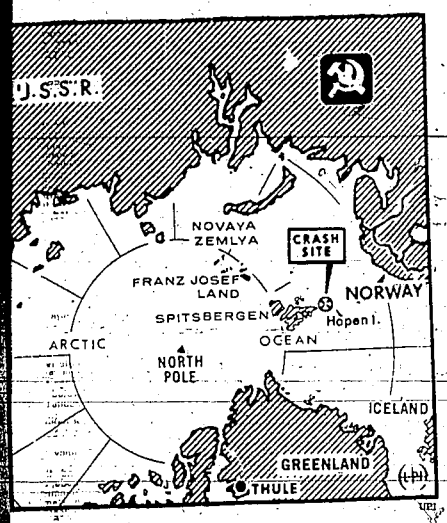

The system was devised to keep illegally underpriced foreign steel out of the American marketplace, thus reducing "unfair" competition to U.S. firms.

Minimum import prices were set and if any steel entered the country below those prices, the Treasury would automatically begin an investigation that could lead to fines and restrictions.

The trigger prices were based on the estimated cost of Japanese production, which the Treasury says is the most efficient in the world.

The loophole is that the Europeans were allowed to sell at the Japanese price, which is below their production cost.

This gives the Europeans a "license to dump" steel products, Foy said. The Europeans offset the American losses by operating their mills at increased capacity and selling elsewhere at a better price.

Soviet plane lost

Norway's military command reported Thursday that a Soviet Tu-126 Moss, one of that nation's largest surveillance planes, crashed Aug. 28 on Hopen Island in the Spitsbergen archipelago, about three miles from a radio station. Wreckage of the plane, which usually carries a crew of 6 to 10, yielded guns, ammunition and bodies.

Eastern, British airlines buy new jets

SEATTLE (UPI) — Eastern Airlines and British Airways have announced their intention to buy approximately $1 billion worth of the Boeing Co.'s new 757 model jetliners, the company said Thursday.

The orders for the 757, a standard body airplane which uses 40 percent less fuel per seat than the 727 model it will replace, have long been expected by Boeing, a company spokesman said.

The exact figures on the intended purchases of 41 jets were not immediately available, said the company spokesman, as details of the contracts were yet to be worked out. Each jet costs almost $20 million, although contracts include additional costs for related training, supplies and services.

Eastern Airlines announced it has ordered 21 planes with an option on 24 more. British Airways has announced its initial order will be for 19 jets.

The Boeing Company has now sold a total of 275 jets this year, a figure surpassed only by sales in 1965, 1966, and 1967. Boeing spokesman Tom Cole said the dollar figures in sales was "way ahead of whatever was second best."

The order pushed the Boeing Co. closer to the $6 billion year forecast recently by E.H. Boulloun, president of the company's commercial airplane company. The $4 billion in sales Boeing achieved last year was the highest on record.

Cole said this year has "been a very unusual year in airplane sales."

On July 14 United Airlines ordered $1.2 billion worth of Boeing's new 767 jetliner, plus 30 more 727s for a total contract of $1.6 billion.

"The order today does not constitute a production go-ahead," said Cole. "The actual go-ahead on the production go-ahead probably won't be given until early next year."

Cole said the new airplane will not fly until early 1982, followed by a year of flight testing before it is put into service.

The 757 has the body of a 727, one aisle and six seats abreast, although longer, with a new wing, new engine, new landing gear, and greater fuel efficiency, "the main design goal," said Cole.

School enrollment shows slight drop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There will be 59.8 million students enrolled in the nation's schools from kindergarten through graduate school this fall, and a record number of college degrees will be awarded, the government said Thursday.

The total enrollment figure is down about 1 percent from the last school year, and has dropped about 2.5 percent from the peak year, 1975, when 61.3 million students were enrolled, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare reported.

The department's Center for Education Statistics also reported:

•Educational expenditures at all levels will exceed $155 billion, up $11 billion from the previous school year.

•When teachers and students are considered together, three out of every 10 Americans are involved in the educational process.

•College enrollment will reach a new high this year, 11.6 million students, and colleges will confer a record 1 million bachelor degrees.

•Next spring's high school graduating class should total 3.1 million, about the same as it has been the past four years.

•Fewer children will be in kindergarten or grade school, about 32.6 million compared to 33.2 million in the previous school year. That downward trend has been going on for almost a decade.

•An estimated 30 percent of persons in the 18 to 24 age bracket will be in college, compared to 94 percent of those of high school age and 99 percent of those of elementary school age.

Navy planners worry about budget paring

©Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The Navy, in a secret memorandum to Defense Secretary Harold Brown, says current Defense Department budget plans would virtually cripple the modernization of the Marine Corps and lead to major shipbuilding cuts threatening to tip the naval balance to the Soviet Union by the 1980s.

The five-page memorandum by Secretary of Navy Graham Claytor Jr., dated May 23, makes it plain the Navy hierarchy is increasingly anxious about budget plans for fiscal years 1980-84.

"Our program provides an average of only 13 ships per year," said Claytor. "This is not an immediate problem," he added, "but unless immediate action is taken . . . to increase the rate of shipbuilding, the Navy we pass to our successors will be smaller and less capable. This is a legacy I do not want to leave, and, at some point we dare not leave it."

The document, obtained Tuesday, was designed to accompany the Navy's Program Objective Memorandum for 1980 to 1984. The so-called POM-80 is an examination of programs and goals in response to financial "guidance" by Brown and his staff.

The programs, under these constraints, "will provide maritime forces marginally superior to those of the Soviets into the early 1980s," Claytor said. "But some trends — particularly in ship construction — are unfavorable and there is cause for concern that the balance will tip to the Soviets unless those trends are reversed."

Perhaps the major surprise in the document are plans to seriously cut back modernization programs for the Marine Corps. The document says that in key reductions planned to meet the financial guidance, the Navy will sharply curtail military construction programs and order "cancellation or delay of virtually all Marine Corps new-start modernization programs."

Eye, ear aid prices come under attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eyeglasses and hearing aids provided Medicaid patients cost too much and the government wants some reductions.

"Many times these prices are unreasonably high," said HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. "These high costs must and can be held down.

"Some states and some federal agencies have already proved that costs can be cut by as much as 50 percent or more through changes in purchasing and payment methods," he said.

Currently 33 states, Guam and the Virgin Islands provide eyeglasses, and 27 states, Guam and the Virgin Islands provide hearing aids.

"However, increasing state Medicaid budgets have recently forced a few states to drop these optional services," the Health, Education and Welfare Department said in a notice in Thursday's Federal Register. "Unless costs can be reduced other states may also be forced to drop them."

The notice asked for comment on ways to bring costs down, such as bulk purchases or price ceilings.

The notice said the Veterans Administration by volume purchasing can now provide veterans with hearing aids for $200 compared to a typical retail cost of $300 to $450.

Rock injures India leader

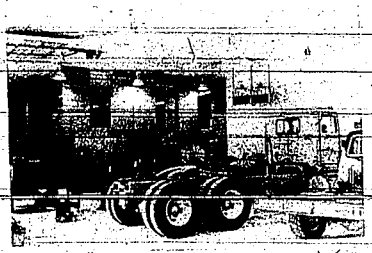

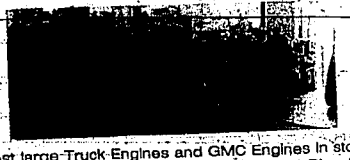

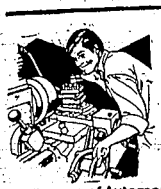

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Foreign Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee was stoned by angry hecklers during a law and order rally Thursday and suffered a deep gash in the forehead that required stiches to stop the bleeding.

Vajpayee, with blood on his clothes, was rushed to parliament house and given first aid and later taken to a hospital for treatment.

Ruling Janata Party member Kanhaiyal Gupta accused former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's supporters for the attack on Vajpayee. They promply denied it.

The incident occured near parliament House when Vajpayee tried to address a rally decrying falling standards in law and order. The rally was organized by women college students.

Witnesses said a group of boys stormed the area and heckled the foreign minister and then tried to push him out of a jeep. "Then the stoning started," a witness said.

Smile when you say that—partner

NEW YORK (UPI) — The big trend for the coming television season shapes up as smiles.

No matter what mayhem a character may contemplate, he performs with a grin. The idea is to sanitize with a smile the violence that remains on the tube.

Only comedy characters are allowed to maintain a frown.

Possibly on "Battlestar Galactica" Lorne Green and interstellar company smile, but the big three-hour opening of the much-touted series hasn't been available for review. In science fiction, violence is cleaned up by the zap-zap quality of its fantastic nature.

As a matter of fact, ABC has been reluctant to let critics get an early glimpse of any of its new series — although as the top-rated network it is replacing fewer old shows with new than its rivals.

Only five newcomers will hit ABC in September — "Galactica," "Taxi!," "Vega$," "Mork and Mindy" and "Apple Pie."

The two-hour pilot for "Vega$" did appear on the air, however, and its hero, played by Robert Urich, managed to maintain an engaging manner even while threatening the life of a thug who had been following him. And the threatened thug smirked back.

Since Mork from the planet Ork, the alien from outer space on "Mork and Mindy," was spun off from an earlier episode of "Happy Days," the smiles are up to the audience.

While the three other ABC shows remain shrouded in mystery, CBS and NBC have been more forthcoming, so the new season begins to take shape.

Aside from "Vega$," the only other new show to fit into the action-adventure mold is NBC's "Sword of Justice." The title "sword" is brandished by Dack Rambo as Jack Cole, rich playboy until framed by the corporate underworld. He doesn't smile much in the slammer, but when he gets out and schemes for revenge, fun and profit, he hides his ruthless pursuit of evildoers behind the weak smile of the wastrel.

In a category between action and drama lies NBC's "The Eddie Capra Mysteries" in which Vince Bagetta stars as an unorthodox lawyer who solves mysteries, smiling sympathetically as he searches for clues. The pilot of this one is set up like an old-fashioned whodunit, gathering all the people with motives in one room. As guest stars, they don't have to smile.

In the general and family drama area, NBC appears not to have "W.E.B." (about a woman network executive) straightened out yet, and CBS' "American Girls" (about two women reporters for a television magazine show) may make the jiggle-watchers jump for joy but will leave a lot of woman grinding their teeth — or sharpening the ax they will have to grind with CBS.

Then there's CBS' "Kaz," the ex-con turned lawyer who softens an abrasive manner with jokes and what is supposed to be appealing, puppy-like clumsiness. The judge wasn't laughing.

CBS also has "Paper Chase," in which a young man and his friends battle the hardships of first year law school under the stern —definitely unsmiling — tutelage of John Houseman recreating his screen role as Prof. Kingsfield. Disquieting here are all the scenes in the pizza parlor where the young hero works — this could turn into "Perry Mason Eats Ethnic."

In no particular category is "Lifeline," NBC's weekly documentary on the lives of doctors. The doctors smile here, and not too often.

In the comedy area, Jack Albertson in "Grandpa Goes to Washington" on NBC has little to smile at as he is mandatorily retired and then fights the bad guys to go to the Senate. He's too busy being endearingly irascible. Larry Linville has little to smile at as his Pentagon-based son whose father calls him Fathead and whose wife insists on feeding him figs, kiwis and zucchini.

MacLean Stevenson has little to smile at as the conservative priest in CBS' "In The Beginning," who is forced to run a storefront mission with the nun he calls Sister Mary Jackass and Attila the Nun. Whether this one will bring smiles to the nation's Catholic viewers remains to be seen.

Joe Namath does smile in "Waverly Wonders" on NBC — got to show those dimples, right? As a basketball coach who also teaches history, this suburban "Kotter" copycat takes what the PTA may consider a most peculiar view of education. But it isn't violent.

"Who's Watching the Kids" was previewed on NBC last spring as "Legs," but the format has been toned down.

Finally, another CBS entry, "WKRP," an MTM production, draws its inspiration from the old "Mary Tyler Moore" show, but instead of a television news department in Minneapolis, the scene is a rock radio station in Cincinnati.

Mary, meantime, will star in a variety show aptly called "Mary," with musical interludes interrupting the heavy comedy format.

That's the message of the new television season — no matter what, keep smiling.

Rietta Wallenda says the act must go on

WARWICK, R.I. (UPI) — Rietta Wallenda is like any other 17-year-old girl — if you can ignore her balancing on a 50-foot-high tightrope twice a day without a net.

She was up on the high wire when her famous grandfather Karl wobbled and fell 120 feet to his death after a strong gust of wind caught him off guard in Puerto Rico last March.

But to the blond, buxom Sarasota, Fla., native, her life is nothing unusual.

"This is what I do, that's all. It's all I know how to do and it's all I want to do," she says.

Rietta is a self-possessed young woman who takes her career and herself in stride.

"At the exact moment of my grandfather's death, I said I wanted to carry on," she said, chain-smoking in her trailer after a performance.

Rietta, in town for a two-week stint at Rocky Point Amusement Park, is touring the country with three other Wallendas, including her brother, Mario, 21. Now that her grandfather is gone, she is the star of the show.

"I've never known any other life. A lot of my family have died doing what I do, but I don't think about it," she said. "When I'm up there, all I do is concentrate on what I'm doing at that exact moment."

Five Wallendas have died walking the tightrope. Another, Rietta's uncle Mario, is paralyzed from the waist down.

Before network television cameras caught Karl Wallenda's topple six months ago, the most celebrated fall occurred in 1962 when two Wallendas died and three others were injured in Detroit when their famed seven-member pyramid collapsed.

The pyramid act, four men on the bottom level, two men on shoulder bars and a woman standing on a chair, was never resurrected. It was recreated with elaborate safety precautions last February for a television special about the Wallenda family.

Today's act is a far cry from the itinerant group of street tumblers and jugglers that started the Wallenda performing tradition back in 18th-century Austria-Hungary.

Today the performers appear in purple satin and sequin suits and climb up the ropes to the soothing rock-jazz sound of Chuck Mangione's song "Feels So Good."

The act still has its tense moments.

Wallenda cousin Farrell Hettig slipped on the rain-slick high wire while skipping a jump rope over Rocky Point. He caught himself by sitting down on the wire — something Karl Wallenda tried to do, but failed.

Not all of Rietta's relatives go into the family business. Her brother Ricky, 22, is studying at a Bible college in Europe. Her sister Valerie, 8, is too young to work professionally.

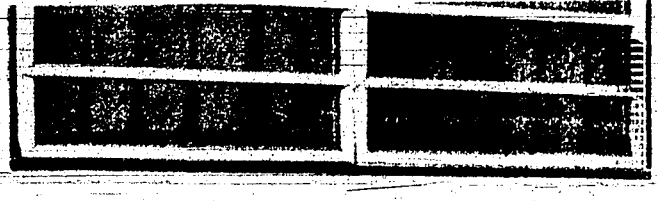

Rietta says her grandfather wouldn't let her work with him until she was 13. "But I practiced on a low wire waiting for that day ever since I was 3. And I took three years of ballet for balance training."

If it hadn't been for high wire, Rietta says she doesn't know what she would've done with her life.

But she said, "I didn't start doing this (high wire) for the glamour.

"It's not so glamourous when you have to sleep in a cold trailer and there's no running water," she said.

"But I guess it's more fun than what most people do."

Reitta Wallenda, 17, was on high wire when grandfather fell to his death

New album just released

Waylon Jennings puts his true feelings on wax

By BOB BATTLE
CountryStyle News Service

"The Outlaw" novelty has worn off for Waylon Jennings.

And in a unique album on the Civil War, the ringleader of "The Outlaws" has become "The Drifter"—a role he seems to relish.

To go a step further—in an album just released—Jennings has put his true feelings on wax with a tune entitled:

"Don't You All Think This Outlaw Bit Has Done Got Out Of Hand?"

Has it really?

"It sure has," Ol' Waylon told CountryStyle as he sipped on a drink at a gala cocktail party at Opryland Hotel. The occasion marked the release of A & M Records' "White Mansions," which features Jennings, Jessi Colter as Polly Ann Stafford, John Dillon as Matthew J. Fuller, and Steve Cash as Caleb Stone.

"The Outlaws" seemed rather serious for months as the RCA album's sales skyrocketed well past the million mark, earning Gold awards for its stars.

"But it was kind of a novelty thing there," Jennings declared, leaving no doubt that he has a great dislike for images.

Cornering Waylon Jennings is like trying to catch a rabbit in a brier patch. He's likely to leave you without notice—and head in a different direction.

In this business, you never give up.

So cornered again, Ol' Waylon—wearing a black Western-type hat—was asked about any "new image."

"You are looking at it," he said with a laugh. "I don't know what them things are anyway.

"It's all in the minds of people, though, Hoss.

"Just say I'm 'a good ol' boy that picks a guitar and tries to sing."

"I'm gonna try to do that. I'm gonna try hard."

"You know, Hoss, I don't go for images."

Apparently he feels the same way about setting goals.

"My goal?" he asked. "Well, I'll tell you," he declared, lifting his glass in salute:

"Finishing this, getting out of here a little bit. And that's about it."

"I just finished that album which should be out in September, and my new single is 'I've Always Been Crazy (It's Kept Me From Going Insane).'"

But he didn't "slip out" on the the "White Mansions" party. He stayed through a 40-minute movie based on the record and a book by Paul Kennerley.

Then he relaxed, and heard himself sing such Civil War songs as: "Dixie, Hold On," "The Union Mare & The Confederate Grey," "The Southland's Bleeding," "They Laid Waste To Our Land" and "Dixie, Now You're Done."

It was Waylon Jennings at his best! Everyone present seemed to agree.

"White Mansions" is a portrayal of life in the Confederate States of America 1861-1865. The high hopes and deep sorrows of the Southern people are reflected in the experiences of the four characters whose combined words tell the tale of the American Civil War.

"It's a Southern album. It's Southern music—as seen through the singers' eyes," Paul Kennerley, the composer, told CountryStyle after the presentation in the hotel's huge Knoxville Room.

"I have an imagination," declared the writer who had never visited the South before he wrote the songs. "I wanted to create an atmosphere I thought existed.

"I had been to New York. That's all."

Kennerley was born and grew up in England. Until a year ago, he ran an artists' management agency that booked rock bands into London pubs.

He spent a year in the United States, working at a New York advertising agency in 1969, but never had crossed the Mason-Dixon line.

"Stories of the South always fascinated me, though. I spent all my pocket money as a child buying toy Confederate soldiers and Elvis records," he recalled.

Then one day he heard Waylon's "That's Why Cowboys Sing The Blues" being played on a London rock station.

"I was knocked out with his style. I went out and bought all his albums. Within a week, I was writing country songs," he said.

Inspiration for the album "White Mansions" developed as Kennerley became immersed in his songwriting. "I always had a vision of the South as a verdant, lush place, with ladies in hoop skirts and young gentlemen riding elegant horses."

"So I began to write a romantic-song-tale set in the Civil War."

Referring to Waylon's role on the album, Kennerley said:

"Waylon is easy to identify with because he already has the reputation as an 'Outlaw.'" He paused, adding:

"Also, Waylon is not well known in England, and I'm hoping that maybe English rock fans will be impressed with him like I was."

He said he studied the Civil War "until I felt I had a command of the subject. I had always had a fascination with it. It's a very highly documented subject—printed for everybody to learn about."

He said several of the songs may be released as singles, including "White Trash," which featured Steve Cash.

"And I'm in the process of doing another album now," he added. "It's on rural Americana—with emphasis on Missouri and Kansas."

Dear Abby

Will chasity belt curb hubby's jealousy?

© Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 28 and my husband is 33. We've been married for six years, and our life would be beautiful if it weren't for his jealousy, which is so intense it borders on insanity!

He has tried everything from psychiatry to prayer meetings, but nothing has helped.

I have never given him any cause to doubt me, but for some reason he doesn't trust me out of his sight. The only thing I can think of that would give him complete peace of mind is a chastity belt!

Will you please tell me where I can get one? I know they haven't been used since the Middle Ages, but there must be one around somewhere. Or perhaps someone who works in metals could make one for me. Whatever the price, it will be worth it.

Please rush your answer to me. This is no joke.

SYLVIA IN GREENWICH

DEAR SYLVIA: The only chastity belts I have ever seen are in museums. But if there are any around for sale, or if I hear of a metalsmith who is willing to fashion one for you, I'll let you know.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and overweight, but everyone tells me I have a pretty face. I've had only two dates in my life, and you just can't imagine how much I'd like to have a boyfriend.

One night at a school hop one of the most popular boys in school took an interest in me. I was in heaven. He offered to take me home, and we parked on the way and he kissed me. It was wonderful. We kissed a lot, and finally I got scared and made him stop.

He said he wanted to see me again, but next time he didn't intend to stop at a kiss. He told me to get wise, that any fat girl can be popular if she will go all the way. I was shocked and asked him to take me right home.

He told me to think it over and call him when I changed my mind. That was two months ago, and I have been thinking it over. I don't want to be a bad girl, but I want a boyfriend. Should I pay the price?

FAT AND LONELY

DEAR FAT: The price might be more than you're prepared to pay. That boy wants to use you. "Fat girls can be popular," he says, "if they go all the way."

Brilliant! So can THIN girls, with the kind of boys who use girls, and then go to fresher game.

He is not for you. And neither is any boy who feeds you that kind of line.

(P.S. PLease look into Overeaters Anonymous. They're terrific for girls with your problem.)

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend went to a bridal shower that was held in the home of another girl she barely knew.

While she was there, someone stole $50 from her coat pocket. That was all the money she had. (I've lent her some money so she can buy groceries this week.)

When my friend told her hostess that she had been ripped off, all the hostess did was say she was very sorry.

Don't you think the hostess should have offered to replace the money?

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: The hostess, in giving a shower for a friend, may not have known all the girls her friend invited. Therefore, the hostess could hardly be held liable for the loss. The moral: Take no chances; always keep your cash with you.

Actor Robert Shaw was also a serious writer

ROBERT SHAW
. . . died at 51

©Chicago Sun-Times

He was a big, rust-haired, hard-drinking Lancastershireman—who could look as mean as hell and then burst out laughing. He wrote novels and plays of stunning power, and he acted in plays by Shakespeare, Harold Pinter and John Arden.

He once predicted that after his death the encyclopedias would describe him as a writer who was "also an actor." But Robert Shaw, who died Monday, is most widely known because of a monolog about sharks.

When he made "Jaws" in 1975, he'd been an actor for 27 years. His five novels, especially "The Hiding Place" and "The Man in the Glass Booth," had won wide respect. He'd acted at Stratford-on-Avon and in London's West End, and starred on Broadway in "The Caretaker," the first Pinter play produced in America. But it was as Quint, the steel-eyed, whiskey-swilling charter boat captain in "Jaws," that Shaw found his greatest popularity.

He had a key scene almost to himself: The long monolog below deck on his boat. Roy Scheider and Richard Dreyfuss sat in awed silence as he put away the booze and explained why he had his own special reason for hating sharks: He'd been one of the 1,000 men on the Indianapolis when it went down, and by the time rescue came, two thirds of them had died of shark bites.

The monolog went on for what seemed like five minutes, there in the flickering lanter-light, and during the silences of his story we could hear the noises of the boat, the bumps and creakings, that seemed to hint that sharks were outside. Shaw's monolog was crucial to the development of the suspense: The giant shark itself was never seen during the movie's first hour, but Shaw's hate-filled memories evoked it better than any variety of special effects.

And then, of course, at the end of the movie Quint disappeared, screaming curses, into the shark's teeth. Scenes like that probably made it difficult for critics to separate the movie star from the serious author. But writing, he said, was the most important thing on earth to him. And the critics, he complained, almost wanted him to recant; they wanted him to say acting was all nonsense, and that he only did it to support his writing.

That wasn't true: He took his acting seriously, too, even if he did sometimes frankly accept roles because of the money he'd make. He won a mass audience through those commercial entertainments: First as the villian in "From Russia, with Love," and then in movies like "The Sting," "The Battle of Britain," "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three" and, last summer, as the crusty treasure hunter in "The Deep" and the Israeli intelligence agent in "Black Sunday."

He was in other movies, too; movies that found smaller audiences but allowed him more range for his talent. He was the unemployed Montreal newspaperman in "The Luck of Ginger Coffey," and the only boarder in the claustrophobic boarding house in Printer's "The Birthday Party," and Henry VIII in "A Man for All Seasons."

Robert Shaw in person was a naturally charismatic man with a big laugh and disarmingly pale blue eyes. He had a sharp satiric sense, he liked to kid, and there was a little of Quint's cheerful hyperbole in his personality.

I met him once in Newmarket, England, during the filming of "The Battle of Britain," in 1968. he was standing in the middle of an old RAF landing field with Ginger Lacey, one of Britain's most famous Battle of Britain aces. Asked what sort of character he'd play, Shaw grinned and said: "A tough, simple squadron leader. A chap who's come up from the bottom. Tight-lipped, modest, heroic. Like Lacey, here, but taller, and thinner, and fitter, and more handsome." Lacey exploded with laughter, and Shaw wrapped an arm around his shoulders and led a general expedition in the direction of the nearest pub.

He lived life at top speed, and the story of his second marriage to actress Mary Ure is illuminating. She'd starred in 1956 in John Osborn's "Look Back in Anger," and a year later she married Osborne. One night two years after that, Shaw and Tony Richardson, the British director, were out drinking at 3 a.m. and decided to visit the Osbornes.

Shaw remembered the moment in an interview with The New York Times: "I'd never met either of them. There was Mary, in a white dressing gown. Osborne wasn't too thrilled to see us. I just stayed long enough to slip Mary my telephone number."

She called the next day. Her divorce from Osborne caused a brief sensation (Shaw was named in a paternity suit). Mary Ure died in 1975, late on the opening night of a successful play she was appearing in.

Marverick's back, only this time in triplicate

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's just like old times, with James Garner in his flashy waistcoat as Bret Maverick, riding into the dusty western town and looking for brother Bart.

But what is this? Instead he finds Ben Maverick, a Harvard-educated cousin played by handsome Charles Frank. Both go off in search of Bart (Jack Kelly), who owes them $1,000.

That's the setup for "The New Maverick," to be shown on ABC Sept. 3, 9-11 p.m., Eastern time, as a Sunday movie but which could turn up later as at least a limited series if the ratings justify the move.

The plot doesn't make too much sense — a corrupt Texas judge who wants to be senator arranges with a Brooklyn badman to steal a shipment of the new gatling guns. He plans to recapture the guns, which will make him a hero like Sam Houston or Jim Bowie, which in turn will make him a sure bet for the Senate.

The Brooklyn gangster has other ideas.

Somehow the cast converges on a little piece of noplace in the middle of nowhere. The good guys win, the bad guys loose, and it is all accomplished with a minimum of violence and a maximum of good humor.

It's fun watching Garner as Maverick, quoting his old Pappy and ambling around the west looking to stay out of trouble and finding nothing but. But his very presence makes it impossible to decide whether young Frank would be able to carry a "Maverick" show on his own — he certainly can't take the stage away from Big Jim.

For those who want their western adventures to be real and now instead of make-believe from yesteryear, "The New Maverick" is preceded on ABC by "Alaska: the American Child," from 7-9 p.m., Eastern time.

The show accompanies John Denver as he goes salmon fishing at the McNeil River, while he visits the small north Alaska village of Barrow where progress has altered the Eskimo life-style, and while he joins the Eskimos of Point Hope on a hunt for the bowhead whale.

Denver's "golly-gee" vocabulary does little to embellish the gorgeous photography as the camera catches king salmon swimming upstream to spawn and die, follows the fishing adventures of some brown bears, or catches the loping stride of a polar bear who eventually snuggles down on the ice like a poodle before a hearth.

The whale hunt reminds the viewer that while the camera is shooting, so are the Eskimos — and they use guns.

Denver and Joe Henry wrote three original songs for the show that provide a pleasant accompaniment.

BEST BERRY BAKE

½ cup soft butter
1 cup sugar
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 quart berries or cherries, drained
1 cup juice

Mix butter with ½ cup sugar. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk. Pour into greased oblong pan. Pour drained berries over batter. Sprinkle cup sugar over berries. Pour the juice over the top. Bake at 375 degrees for 45 minutes.

Two cups of fresh berries, crushed, and 1 cup of water may be substituted for the canned berries and juice. You may wish to use additional sugar also.

Blue Lakes Inn lounge remodeling under way

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An additional 1,200 square feet of space is being added to the Blue Lakes Inn to expand and remodel the lounge.

Work began Tuesday and is expected to take about five weeks. When completed, the room will be known as the Pepper Tree Lounge.

Jon Ashment, general manager of Blue Lakes Inn, said there will be an outside entrance from the parking lot to the lounge, eliminating the need for traveling from the front entrance down the long hall to reach it.

Ashment said the expansion will also provide added band space, allowing five-piece groups rather than the present limit of two to three musicians. New restrooms will also added in the lounge addition.

Construction will be handled by Idaho Land Development Co., with Bud Foesburg of Boise as construction manager. When completed, the lounge will seat 120 people, compared to the present capacity of about 70.

Ralph A. Jones of Boise, president and general manager of hotel operations for Littletree Inns Corp., owners of the Blue Lakes Inn, was in Twin Falls Tuesday to discuss the start of construction.

Ashment said the owners are looking at another expansion, probably in the spring. Plans are to add a major number of rooms and possibly other facilities.

Early this summer the Blue Lakes Inn completed and opened the Tree Hut, a patio dining facility beside the swimming pool. Ashment said the open air cafe has proven exceptionally popular with many organizations who use it for meetings and with residents of the area for holding wedding receptions and reunions. A small, circular bar is located in the Tree Hut area, and food is served from the adjoining coffee shop.

Ashment, who became manager in May, has made a number of changes in the banquet facilities and plans to hold special events each month for the public as well as motel guests.

He said a western open pit barbecue will be held Sept. 5, Labor Day, with beef, lamb and turkey cooked and served in the inn's parking lot.

Beginning Sept. 4, free football will be shown each Monday night on a wide television screen in the banquet room. Refreshments and alcoholic beverages will be sold.

Other special events during the year will include public parties for Christmas, New Year's Eve, Thanksgiving and other holidays. Ashment said the aim of the programs is to provide entertainment for Magic Valley residents coming to Twin Falls for shopping and business, for Twin Falls residents and for guests of the Inn.

Potato futures stay strong

CHICAGO — Maine potato futures continued to advance Thursday but meats and metals declined while grains were weaker.

Commodity News Service said Maine spuds closed unchanged to 14 points higher in fairly light trading which produced a total volume of 1,917 lots. Of those, 1,641 were in the May ntract.

After opening about unchanged om Wednesday's close, the market aded actively but slipped about 7 ents before running up to a high of 7.81 per hundredweight, basis May, and another rally took May to 16 points up before the close.

A late break left live cattle down 60 to 7 points, except for most deferred December which was 5 points up. Traders attributed the break to profit taking and liquidation ahead of the Labor Day holiday weekend. Volume was 28,182 contracts.

Feeder cattle ended mostly lower as a late break erased earlier gains and left the settlement off 42 to 2 points on a trade of 1,841 contracts.

Profit taking helped trim early gains in live hogs, which ended mixed, 15 points up to 5 points off on a trade of 6,013 contracts.

Pork bellies closed 12 to 32 points down on a trade of 3,832 contracts as talk of heavier marketings and lack of support dominated the day's activity.

Wheat followed soybeans lower but closed above Wednesday's settlements, ending 3¼ cents to ¾ cent higher except for July which finished ¼ cent lower.

Corn ended 1¼ cents to a cent lower after early speculative support evaporated as uncertainty developed in the bean complex.

Soybeans spent an indecisive morning, then took their cue from oil and eased off, with beans closing ¼ cent to 4¾ cents down, oil off 77 to 35 points and meal 1.50 to 50 cents higher.

New York Sugar 11 closed strongly, advancing 16 to 23 points on a trade of 7,850 lots, largely as a result of forecasts that supply and demand next year will be more in line.

New York Comex gold closed 100 to 60 points lower on a volume of 16,500 contracts, under pressure from trade hedge selling, speculative stop loss selling and a pickup in the United States dollar.

New York Comex silver saw preholiday evening up contribute to modest losses of 80 to 30 points on a trade of 9,000 contracts.

Western, Continental airlines plan merger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Western Airlines and Continental Airlines announced Thursday they had agreed in principle to merge by forming a new corporation.

The name of the new corporation and its structure will be determined at a later date, a spokesman said.

Western serves more than 33,000 route miles with 77 airplanes and Continental flies more than 34,000 miles with 57 aircraft. Each of the airlines has more than 10,000 employees.

The spokesman said the route systems of the two airlines are complementary and when combined, will provide improved air service and "enormous public benefits for a large section of the country."

While the combined carriers will rank only seventh among U.S. domestic airlines, the merger will create a strong carrier that can finance new equipment, expand and compete more effectively and aggressively against the giants of the industry."

Western had operating revenues of $755.6 million and net income of $43.8 million during the year which ended June 30 while Continental had operating revenues of $715.5 million and a net income of $50 million.

Western serves 41 cities, mostly in the western United States, while Continental serves 32 locations, from Florida to the Pacific and Japan. Both companies are based in Los Angeles and serve 13 common points.

Mass help for chicks

BOWDOIN, Maine (UPI) — When James Economou's artesian well suddenly dried up, it took two state agencies, a local fire department and the U.S. Army Reserve to quench the thirst of his 52,000 baby chickens, the farmer said Friday.

The month-old chicks were without water 18 hours this week before help arrived in the form of a U.S. Army Reserve 400-gallon tanker truck filled with water from the Bowdoinham Fire Department.

But Economou said all of the baby birds survived the dry spell with nothing more serious than a hefty thirst.

Life insurance puzzlers

(©1978 Field Enterprises, Inc.)

How much life insurance do you need? How much life insurance can you and your family afford?

Of all the nagging questions in connection with life insurance, these are two of the most common, most complicated, most mystifying. What's more, although there are basic guidelines, there are simply no easy answers — and if any salesman tries to convince you there are, turn away.

How much life insurance do you need? That answer demands two approaches: (1) income replacement, or what do you consider your obligations to be to your family and how do you figure is the best way to carry them out; (2) personalized needs, or what readjustment period will your family need while their financial lives and financial affairs are being reshaped.

To be more specific:

If you are the only breadwinner in your family and you have dependent children, you must calculate how much money will be needed to feed, clothe, shelter them, as well as to finance your children's educations until they are ready to go out on their own.

A starting point, Bankers Life of Des Moines emphasizes, is what you already have — policies in force, death benefits through employer or other group insurance, and survivor benefits provided by the government under Social Security or other benefit programs.

After that, you can figure out how much more you will need to replace family income that will be lost if you die.

The older you are, the more your insurance will cost. A balancing factor, though, is that, in calculating how much you will need to protect your survivors, the older the children are the fewer will be the years you must support them until they can go on their own.

An amount usually recommended is about three-fourths of your take-home pay. But there are no hard rules! The actual amount may vary from as little as half, or even less, to carrying enough insurance to get 100 percent salary replacement, before or after taxes. Much depends on the living standard to be maintained.

Assuming you are carrying some insurance now, a factor you must weigh with utmost care in buying more protection is inflation. The amount of insurance you carry probably reflects how much you earn — but since your earnings tend to rise with prices as part of an inflationary spiral, you may have some hedge against past and even current inflation built into the insurance you already own.

In coping with future inflation, though, the loss of buying power for your survivors can be a problem if the replacement income your insurance provides for them is level in terms of today's dollars. You won't need to worry about Social Security survivor benefits, however; an automatic correction for the cost of living is included in these benefits, based on increases in the Consumer Price Index (CPI).

On top of replacing lost income, what are the personalized needs the insurance proceeds must cover, short and long-term?

Among these personalized needs, identified by time periods, are: a readjustment period while your family's financial affairs are being overhauled; following that, the length of time dependent children must be protected, including schooling; then the time span between the time the youngest child gains independence and the surviving spouse becomes eligible for Social Security retirement benefits; finally, the span when the surviving spouse is on Social Security.

Not immediately obvious factors here will be the unusually high expenses while the children are in college; the entrance or reentrance of the surviving spouse into the job market; remarriage by the survivor.

There also are the special one-time needs that go beyond income replacement, such as funeral expenses, debts, estate or income taxes, or merely providing a sufficient sum to clear up the family's financial situation, so no obligations are left over.

An illustration of special needs might be insurance in the amount of a remaining mortgage on a home or farm property, so it is "free and clear" to the survivor or other heirs.

Gambling stocks fuel trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices were lower at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Thursday following the government's report that its July economic indicators declined. Trading was fairly active, helped by a surge in gambling stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average average, a 0.52-point winner Wednesday, was off 3.89 points to 876.81 shortly before the NYSE closed. Earlier, it had been down about 6 points. The Dow lost 17.15 points in the three sessions prior to Wednesday.

Declines led advances by a 4-to-3 ratio among the 1,865 issues crossing the composite tape at 4 p.m. EDT.

NYSE turnover amounted to about 33,910,000 shares, down from the 37,750,000 traded Wednesday.

Prices were mixed in active trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Analysts said investors were disappointed by the 0.7 percent drop in the government's July economic indicators and Wednesday's report of a 3.8 percent plunge in factory orders. These reports indicated the economy was slowing down.

As a result, the dollar lost its upward momemtum abroad. It had rebounded earlier in response to a ¼-point rise in the prime lending rate banks charge leading customers to 9¼ percent, a 3½-year high.

Gambling issues dominated action for the fifth straight day as speculators scrambled to buy any stock having interests in Atlantic City, N.J., where casino gambling is legal, and Miami Beach, where voters will decide its fate in November.

Ramada Inns, a 7 percent owner of Del E. Webb, was active and higher most of the day. Webb announced it was negotiating to acquire hotel property in Atlantic City, N.J. and Miami Beach.

Bally Manufacturing, a 9-point winner Wednesday, was active and higher again. Bally, which manufactures slot machines, hopes to open a casino in Atlantic City. Among the other gambling issues, Playboy Enterprises and Hilton Hotels were higher at one point.

On the Amex, Showboat Inc. attracted attention. The firm has bought Sunset Traitel Co. Inc., whose chief asset is 7 acres of land next to Showboat's Las Vegas resort complex. Also on the Amex, Golden Nugget, Prime Motor Inns, Forest City Enterprises and American Motor Inns won support at one time.

Bristol-Myers was one of the most active NYSE issues after block trades of 222,300 shares at 39 and 102,000 shares at 38¾. The firm reached a licensing pact with the Swiss firm Sandoz Ltd. for cancer-fighting products.

Boeing Corp. was sharply higher at one time. The firm announced plans for a new narrow-bodied 757 aircraft. Boeing has orders from Eastern Airlines for 21 of the new aircraft and from British Airways for 19.

Rolm Corp. attracted buyers. The California computer firm late Wednesday reported its fiscal year earnings rose to $1.02 a share from 57 cents the year before.

Storage Technology was higher after the firm predicted its 1978 earnings would total about $2 a share versus $1.07 a year ago.

On the Amex, Amdahl was sharply higher at one point. The firm recently reported higher-than-expected earnings and several analysts have revised upward their projections for the year.

Bomar Instruments could not account for the strength of its stock.

Sprays help big ivy patch

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Brown University is proud of the lush green vines climbing its famous Ivy League walls — except for one monster patch of poison ivy that won't go away.

As head groundskeeper Frank Dorsey tells it, the more the patch is sprayed, the higher it grows.

The poison ivy at Brown's Aldrich-Dexter field is now more than 12 feet high. It hangs over the wall at Angell Street and Arlington Avenue, to the dismay of neighbors and passersby who complained to the school.

"I've sprayed that thing at least five times, with the same stuff I use to spray all the poison ivy. It kills all the rest ... but it appears to be fertilizing this damn thing," Dorsey said.

"I even sprayed it double strength once. Double strength is enough to kill a horse, but it won't kill that patch of poison ivy," he said.

Dorsey says it is hard to find sprays to use any more because "it's got to be environmentally safe, non-toxic to animals and all that stuff."

INVESTIGATOR WANTED

Investigator for law firm to work on Criminal, Personal Injury, Divorce, Real Estate and other type cases set for trial. Must like people, be self motivated and have ability to get along with people.

Experience desirable, but potential for learning and being trained more important.

Salary negotiable based upon experience — good fringe benefits. Write to Box D-12 c/o Times-News.

SOLAR ENERGY DISTRIBUTORS AND DEALERS WANTED

Solar energy is far beyond the blueprint stage. Solar heating is expected to provide 10% of the nation's needs by 1985 — several million homes and businesses. The new energy law, when passed, provides tremendous tax incentives to purchase solar energy now. Valmont Energy Systems, Inc., has developed a forced-air domestic solar heating system, using eutectic salt as the storage medium. This new storage system, developed by Dr. Maria Telkes, renowned scientist and leading expert in eutectic salt research, solves the major problems of efficient storage of large quantities of heat in a small space. Dr. Telkes, in conjunction with American Technological University, heads Valmont's thermal storage research and design. A revolutionary, low cost domestic hot water heating package is also available. To help assure your success, Valmont will also provide complete and comprehensive management services, including training in all phases of marketing, sales, engineering, service and installation. This is an opportunity to participate in an emerging growth industry with a well managed, well financed, progressive company.

Basques threaten attacks

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Basque separatist guerrillas said Thursday they have opened a permanent armed offensive against Spain's police and threatened to assassinate the interior minister and the leader of a right-wing political party for "exploiting" the Basque people.

A communique from the underground ETA's politico-military wing said its gunmen opened the offensive by killing an off-duty police inspector Monday night in the Basque town of Fuenterrabia.

The policeman was one of four assassinated in Spain Monday.

Other bands of terrorists have claimed responsibility for the killings earlier in the day in the Catalan city of Barcelona, the Galician shrine town of Santiago de Compostela and Mondragon, also a Basque town.

The latest killings brought the number of policemen assassinated in Spain this year to 18 — 12 of them in the northern Basque country.

ETA — the Basque Homeland and Liberty — said it would keep up an armed offensive against police forces until they were dissolved.

The communique distributed to news media said ETA also would retaliate "in a selective manner" against exploiters of the Basque people.

Among those threatened with death it listed Interior Minister Rodolfo Martin Villa and Manuel Frage Iribarne, leader of the Popular Alliance.

Amin gets royal snub by prince

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — With the deft aplomb only royalty can carry off, Prince Charles gave a cold shoulder to President Idi Amin of Uganda Thursday at the state funeral of President Jomo Kenyatta.

Charles, resplendent in a white naval commander's uniform, was mingling with other dignitaries at the graveside on parliament grounds when the hulking figure of Amin strode in with his small son, Mwanga.

While Amin was shaking hands with President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Charles quickly turned to another British official and began an animated conversation.

Amin strode back and forth impatiently for a few minutes at Charles' back, waiting to shake hands with the heir to the British throne but finally sat down three chairs away from the prince. Neither spoke nor glanced in each other's direction.

It was apparently a deliberate ploy by the son of Queen Elizabeth II to avoid an embarrassing meeting with Amin.

Britain in 1976 severed diplomatic relations with Amin's government — the first time it has done so with any Commonwealth country — following the murder of Mrs. Dora Bloch, a British-Israeli citizen who was left behind in Uganda after the Israeli commando raid at Entebbe airport to free hijack hostages.

Both men later offered their condolences separately to Kenyatta's widow, Mama Ngina.

Charles, accompanied by two British soldiers, laid wreaths on the gray marble tomb of the late president. Amin also placed his own small wreath in the mausoleum.

Nuclear test thump jolts resort city

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Energy detonated a nuclear warhead 2,233 feet below the desert at the Nevada Test Site Thursday, sending shock waves that were felt 80 miles away in Las Vegas.

The blast, code-named "Panir," went off on schedule at 8 a.m. MDT. It was the seventh announced nuclear test explosion this year and the 317th underground blast at the site since a treaty with Russia banned atmospheric testing in 1963.

For the first time in two years, reporters were allowed to observe the test from the control point several miles from ground zero. They reported dust bounced up when the explosion thumped the earth upwards.

A gentle east-west rocking motion reached Las Vegas about 45 seconds after the blast, causing hanging objects such as plants and chandeliers to sway.

Seismologists at the University of California at Berkeley said the test had an equivalent Richter magnitude of 5.5.

There was no radiation leak from the explosion, according to readings taken immediately after the detonation.

Key Airlines to resume Twin Falls flights

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three airlines will serve Twin Falls after all.

The "last" Key Airlines flight to Twin Falls left Thursday. But by next spring, the little airline will be back.

Key ended service in July from Twin Falls to Hailey and Thursday discontinued its other Twin Falls flight which connected the city with Burley, Boise and Salt Lake City. Now Key's president says the company will resume service from Twin Falls to Hailey and Salt Lake City March 1.

Hughes Airwest will be the only airline serving Twin Falls until January when Gem State Airlines begins service. Gem, based in Coeur d'Alene, decided to move in after Key announced in August the end of its flights.

Key president Brent Wiseman said he never planned to permanently discontinue service to Twin Falls. Asked why the Salt Lake City-Twin Falls-Hailey route was abandoned in July, Wiseman said Key's temporary service permit expired before company leaders decided to apply to continue the route on a permanent basis.

Key was given temporary permission last March from the Civil Aeronautics Board for "trial" service from Salt Lake City to Hailey with a stop in Twin Falls. After two months, the airline discontinued flights on that route because Wiseman felt there weren't enough passengers.

However, Wiseman claimed Thursday he never intended to give up Twin Falls service, but the temporary permit expired before he had time to get a new one. He says he'll apply next month to resume the Salt Lake City-Twin Falls-Hailey route.

Key's flights won't begin for six months because the CAB must first approve Key's application, according to Wiseman.

Wiseman said if the application is approved, the airline will fly one flight daily, Monday through Friday, between Salt Lake City and Hailey with a stop in Twin Falls.

Last April the airline began flying that route and the Boise-Twin Falls-Burley-Salt Lake City route as an experiment to see if there was a demand for airline service between those points. In August Wiseman announced the airline was giving up both routes because they weren't drawing enough passengers.

Wiseman now says, "There's a traffic demand in Twin Falls that Hughes Airwest isn't filling," and so Key wants to resume service here.

According to Wiseman, 10 to 15 people a day fly out of Twin Falls on a Key flight departing at 2 p.m. for Salt Lake City.

However, he said there are no plans to resume service from Twin Falls to Boise or Burley.

Gem State's flights will connect Twin Falls to Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Boise, Lewiston, Moscow and Couer D'Alene. Airwest flies from Twin Falls to Salt Lake City, Idaho Falls and Stockton, Calif.

Key's new flights will leave Twin Falls for Salt Lake City at 1 p.m and will leave Twin Falls for Hailey at 2:30 p.m. Airwest flights leave Twin Falls for Salt Lake City at 6 a.m. and 5 and 8:30 p.m.

Key will fly Convair 440s, a 45-passenger airplane, from Twin Falls. The $15 fare Key charged on the old Twin Falls-Sun Valley route will probably rise, Wiseman said.

Boy Scout building purchased

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Boy Scout building in downtown Twin Falls has been sold and will become a new lounge and offices.

The building on the corner of Main Avenue North and 2nd Street North was purchased by the Titan Corp., a group of Twin Falls residents with Jerry Shane, owner of Shane's Fine Furniture across the street, as president.

Del Hanks, executive director, said Thursday the Snake River Area Boy Scout staff will vacate the main floor of the building Tuesday, and will move into temporary offices on the second floor.

Hanks said the sale, for $60,000 cash, was approved by the council board of directors Wednesday night.

With the sale of the building and several major donations, Hanks said, the council hopes to go ahead with a new building. Some donations, he said, have already been assured.

"We have also received a gift of nearly three acres of land from one of our outstanding citizens, Mrs. Carl Mogensen. We feel this can be used in the future building plan," Hanks said.

He said Architect Richard Heindel of Twin Falls has been asked to prepare plans for a new building. The new facility will be designed to allow the Scouts to house all offices and storage facilities in one location, the executive said.

Shane said his group plans to allow the Boy Scouts to use the second story of the building without charge until the staff can move to a new facility. Work will begin immediately to remodel the street level.

Shane said a sophisticated mall bar with fashionable decor and service will be built to serve downtown mall shoppers, professional and business people.

"This is something we think the mall needs. We want it to be the type of business women shoppers will patronize for a light lunch or cocktail during their shopping tours and where professional persons and downtown business personnel can enjoy a quiet drink in a pleasing atmosphere," Shane said.

He said his group purchased the liquor license from D. J.'s lounge when it closed earlier this year. Shane is one of four Twin Falls men in Titan Corp. but he said the others do not wish their names announced at this time.

Hanks said several months ago the Boy Scouts faced a decision whether to renovate or acquire a new building.

"The board decided it would be difficult to go to the community with a special fund drive asking for $50,000 for repair of an old building. Board members directed us to attempt to sell the building."

Buyer Keith Perry of Seattle in his motel room in Twin Falls this week — his first visit

Selling too cheap?

Coin and trinket prices vary with dealers

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Numismatist. It's a hard word to say and the definition is even harder to remember.

Keith Perry is one person who doesn't have that problem, however, because he is one. A coin collector, that is.

A traveling buyer of gold and silver and collector's coins for Rare Coin Galleries of Seattle, Perry finished his first three-day buying trip in Twin Falls Thursday.

Perry estimated the stop means Twin Falls area residents will be $12,000 to $15,000 richer in return for 300 to 500 stored-away stopwatches, stamps, foreign and U.S. coins, diamonds, bank notes and the odd World War II souvenir tucked away in a dusty niche for more than three decades.

While Perry sounded optimistic about his company's first visit, a resident Twin Falls dealer and a noted amateur expert weren't so happy.

"They travel constantly, city to city, looking for the type of items they advertised (they would buy) here," said Howard Kinsfather, owner of Idaho Coin Galleries in Twin Falls. "It is a legitimate business, but they don't offer the same price that I do."

For example, Kinsfather said where the traveling buyer offered about $27.50 on a quarter-carat diamond, "I pay $100." A $20 gold piece is advertised by the out-of-towner as being worth a minimum of $160 compared to Kinsfather's beginning price of $260.

"If you stop to look at a $20 gold piece, they're paying about 15 percent below the actual value of the gold in a gold piece, not taking into consideration the actual numismatic value of it.

Frank Schell, a retired College of Southern Idaho instructor who is a well-known coin expert from Twin Falls, flatly says: "I wouldn't sell 'em anything."

Schell says it isn't because such an operation is "crooked or anything like that, but there are so many different grades of coins that make so much difference" in the price people can get.

"Ordinarily, they buy too cheap. They don't buy for as much as they should. They deal with people who don't know what they are doing...it's quite evident if a dealer buys from you he will try to downgrade it and sell on a higher grade, unless you know him," he explained.

Schell said knowing the local coin dealer, like Kinsfather, is a protection for the uneducated buyer or seller. "I've never heard of him doing anything wrong. He has leaned over backwards to treat people fair."

Perry, whose firm and he are registered in the highly-respected coin collectors' group, the American Numismatic Association, people come to him because of two factors — he pays in cash and they know by the newspaper advertisements the company runs just what is paid.

He cautioned some of the newspaper prices are set low in case a poor-quality item comes in which could not command a higher price on the retail market. The double eagle price of $160 was one example, Perry said, because he normally pays $200 and up.

Perry said having a company like Rare Coin Galleries, which sends a buyer to a town about twice a year, come into a town doesn't hurt the local dealers, either.

When he owned a coin shop in Seattle before becoming a traveling buyer three years ago, Perry claimed traffic picked up in his store with people coming in and calling to compare prices being offered by the visitor.

Blaine County voters reject pool

HAILEY — Blaine County voters Thursday turned down a proposal to build a $1.3 million year-round swimming pool.

The general obligation bond needed a two-thirds majority to pass but 618 voters rejected the proposal while only 468 favored it.

If approved the money would have financed an indoor swimming pool facility for the county.

Voting took place in the special county-wide election at three polling places. The breakdowns were as follows: Ketchum-Sun Valley, 85 in favor, 60 opposed; Hailey, 360 in favor, 291 opposed; and Carey, 23 in favor, 267 opposed.

The Blaine County Recreation District had been working on plans for the pool since 1975. The district had found a site adjacent to the junior high school in Hailey.

Waterusers protest plan to divert Snake River

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A recent application for water by the Idaho Water Resources Board brought a shower of protest from irrigators across the state this week.

Farmers as far away as St. Anthony are raising their voices about a proposal to divert winter flow of the Snake River at Milner Dam in Magic Valley to irrigate the Bruneau Plateau.

Dissenters say they did not receive adequate warning of the plan and doubt there is enough water in the river on an average year to meet demands of 1.7 million acre feet per annum.

Waterusers should be concerned about the proposal, according to a state water board member, but he predicted even if the project gets off the ground, it is "20 years away."

A quiet announcement by the Idaho Department of Water Resources, nearly overlooked by Magic Valley irrigators, has stirred nearly every canal company and irrigation district in the valley to protest.

Several irrigation groups in eastern Idaho are also formulating protests to the action before the Sept. 4 deadline set by the IDWR.

"We plan to file tomorrow," John Rosholt, attorney for the Twin Falls Canal Company, said Thursday from his office in Twin Falls. Rosholt would not disclose the contents of the protest he plans to mail to the Twin Falls IDWR office.

"We're don't know yet (if it will affect us)," Ted Diehl, manager of the Northside Canal Company in Jerome, said Thursday. "We're going to protest."

In faraway St. Anthony, Cy Young, secretary of the North Fork Watersers Protective Association, said his group is just formulating meetings to discuss the Idaho Water Resources Board proposal, and "everything indicates we will protest it."

Young said his group does not agree there is enough unclaimed flow in the Snake River to accomodate the water rights application on file with the IDWR.

He said in 1964 when he went to Washington, D.C., to testify for construction of the Teton Dam, congressional representatives told him the usable water in the Snake River was already adjudicated."

"We can't understand where all this water is coming from," Young said. In 1964, Teton water users were asking for only 300,000 acre feet of water. They were told they would have to drill deep wells to replace Snake River backed up by the planned Teton Dam.

Water users in Magic Valley also disputed the 1.7 million a.f. figure and state water officials said they arrived at the figure "based purely on the amount of land" they expect to irrigate, not actual water statistics.

Don Kramer of Castleford, a board member, said 1.7 million acre feet is the result of multiplying 327,000 acres by five acre feet of water needed to irrigate crops.

IDWR director Stephen Allred said the average annual flow past Milner Dam is about 1.4 million a.f., but the board wanted to file on enough water to handle its acreage.

He also said 327,000 acres is the maximum irrigable area on the plateau.

"The eventual project would be quite a bit less than that I, imagine," Allred said. "You can always go down, but you can't go up."

Early this spring Allred announced a plan to divert Snake River water at Milner Dam and transport it to the Bruneau Plateau west of the Twin Falls Tract for gravity irrigation.

Allred said the proposed project is a follow-up on this year's approved state water plan which emphasizes beneficial use of all Idaho's water resources.

Allred said the project's highest priority is to convert about 80,000 acres of high lift pumping projects on the plateau to gravity irrigation to save electrical power.

Another 250,000 acres of class I and class II irrigable lands are also targeted for eventual development and gravity irrigation in the project. Most of the land is available to ambitious farmers through the Carey Act and under federal reclamation law.

On Aug. 17 and 24, the Water Resources Board announced in Times-News legal advertisements an application to the Department of Water Resources for rights to 1.7 million acre feet of Snake River between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31 each year.

The legal ad announced the IWRB planned to divert the water at Milner Dam for 327,140 acres of lands on the Bruneau Plateau.

Beekeepers start protest against Penn-Cap M

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

JEROME — Beekeepers in the Magic Valley have been quietly discussing what to do about pesticide-caused beekills.

That talk will get louder when the Idaho Association of Beekeepers holds its convention in Boise in November.

The convention will address the problem of what to do about Penn-Cap M, the pesticide keepers say is responsible for the beekills. Many in the Magic Valley who were hurt by a wave of kills this summer say they want use of Penn-Cap M restricted.

Meanwhile, until the convention, many keepers are starting a writing campaign to the Environmental Protection Agency, which is investigating the chemical.

"I'd like to see a restriction on its use," commented Larry Hancock, a Jerome beekeeper who is vice president of the IAB.

Hancock expects the organization to issue a statement to the Environmental Protection Agency or the Idaho Department of Agriculture in November.

"There's not much more we can do other than state our position," Hancock said.

Hancock is one of the state's largest beekeepers, with 5,000 hives in Idaho and Montana and a pollination business in central California.

This year, he said "Every hive in the outfit was damaged." He estimates the kills cost him between $5 and $7 per hive.

Together with poor weather conditions he expects his bee business to gross $60,000 to $65,000 less this year than last year.

The pesticide which caused the kills, according to beekeepers, is encapsulated methyl parathion, an insecticide sold under the brand name of Penn-Cap M and used on alfalfa, peas and fruit crops. Penn-Cap M was banned in Idaho in 1976 because it damaged bee populations, but the ban was removed last year because of a technicality.

Hancock wants use of Penn-Cap M restricted to early spring, and banned from use on crops while they're blossoming. That's when bees pick up the microscopic capsules of methyl parathion and carry them back to the hives, where larvae are fatally contaminated.

Last month Dan Bench, an Environmental Protection Agency official in Denver anounced he is investigating the substance and asked beekeepers to send him proof of pesticide-caused damages.

Charles Miller, a Twin Falls beekeeper with 2,000 hives, is going to send evidence of what he calls a "total wipeout" of his hives in Twin Falls, Jerome and Lincoln counties this year. He says three separate sprayings caused the kills.

Miller has also begun a campaign of sending letters to Bench from a network of beekeepers in Idaho, Utah and California.

"The man is going to get flooded with proof," Miller said. "The bigger the family that sends him this information, the better."

Holiday weather perfect

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents should have ideal warm sunny fall weather for the last holiday weekend of summer, National Weather Service officials say.

A high pressure area is expected to give the area warm, sunny and dry weather through through the weekend and most of Monday. If showers move into the area it will probably not happen until late Monday.

For the opening of the Twin Falls County Fair and crews who will be setting up displays and booths at the Filer fairgrounds over the weekend, there should be no problems. Some cooler temperatures and showers may move into the area for Tuesday, however.

Campers, hikers and others going into recreation areas can also look for some excellent weather, but Sawtooth Forest officials say go early into the most popular camp and picnic areas because sites will probably be taken by Friday afternoon, especially in such areas as Redfish and Stanley Lakes.

Cooler temperatures have aided fire conditions, but lower regions are especially dry and forest users are asked to take necessary precautions with fire.

Idaho State police say they expect heavy traffic for the final holiday with especially busy traffic Monday evening. Officers will be on the highways in full force to assist motorists and encouraged observance of traffic regulations.

Press club gives ultimatum

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Press Club said Thursday Sen. James McClure and Rep. George Hansen have until Sept. 8 to decide if they will debate their opponents under a program announced by the club in May.

Press Club coordinator John Corlett also said Gov. John Evans was informed the club will adhere to its format of classic debate rules and asked him to participate in at least two debates with his Republican opponent, Allan Larsen. Larsen has agreed to debate Evans, who has said he would debate Oct. 3, if reporters ask the questions.

McClure said last week he hoped to "make at least one of the three debates" while Hansen offered no assurance he would participate in two debates with his Democratic opponent, Stan Kress. Dwight Jensen, McClure's Democratic opponent, and Kress agreed to the club's October and November schedule.

Rep. Steve Symms, a Republican, and his opponent Roy Truby have agreed to debate.

"We must know whether you will debate," Press Club President Rod Gramer said in letters to McClure and Hansen. "Without knowing your answer, your opponent's campaign schedule and the public are left in limbo. We must reschedule accomodations for the debates, let our referees know when the debates are, arrange advertising...and make press arrangements."

All candidates for governor, U.S. Senate, and Congress were asked in letters mailed June 1 to participate in the debates. The letters included rules for the debates and tentative dates for the events, to be held in Boise, Moscow, and Pocatello. The September dates for three senatorial and two congressional debates for each district were changed early in August because Congress will be in session until about Oct. 9.

The McClure-Jensen debates are scheduled for Oct. 11 at Moscow, Oct. 26 at Pocatello, and Nov. 2 at Boise. The Hansen-Kress debates are set for Oct. 17 at Pocatello and Oct. 24 at Boise. Symms and Truby will square off in Moscow Oct. 10 and Boise Oct. 19.

GOP rally today in Rupert

RUPERT — Free hamburgers and soft drinks are being served in Rupert's town square beginning at 5 p.m. tonight to highlight a Republican Party "Get To Know the Candidates" evening.

Featured speakers include U.S. Sen. James McClure, U.S. Rep. George Hansen and gubernatorial challenger Allan Larsen.

Minidoka County GOP Chairman Pete Ford said the festivities, sponsored by the county's GOP central committee, "will run until the crowd grows weary."

Ford said McClure will speak at 6 p.m. and will be followed by Hansen and Larsen, with musical interludes planned between the speakers.

The county chairman also said local level and legislative district and state candidates will be in attendance. David Leroy, candidate for attorney general, and Phil Batt, candidate for lieutenant governor, or his representative have said they would make appearances.

Ford said the picnic is free and will probably last until 8 p.m.

Officials meet with ousted police chief

BURLEY — The Burley City Council met briefly in executive session with outgoing Police Chief Richard May Thursday morning to discuss his forced resignation.

Mayor Chuck Shadduck said the meeting at city hall came at May's request and was held during a special council meeting to discuss sewer hookups and airport space rental agreements.

Shadduck did not disclose what was discussed, but he did say the situation remains unchanged, with May being forced to resign effective Saturday.

May has been Burley police chief since June 2, 1975. He was forced to resign after a report given to Shadduck Monday afternoon by a special police study committee recommended his resignation be asked for or that he be fired if he refused to quit.

Gil to be sentenced

RUPERT — A sentencing hearing for a Mexican national convicted of voluntary manslaughter is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday before 5th District Judge Sherman Bellwood.

Bellwood can sentence Leodegurio Juarez Gil for up to 10 years in prison and fine him $2,000 for his conviction by a Rupert jury Aug. 19.

Gil, 29, was convicted of the gunshot slaying of Francisco Vega, 33, also a Mexican national, outside a Minidoka bar early in the morning of Jan. 22.

He was tried for first-degree murder and the jury reduced the charge to voluntary manslaughter after 10 hours of deliberation.

Following his conviction, Bellwood ordered that Gil undergo a presentencing psychiatric and psychological examination before being sentenced.

Bruins invade Minico in grid opener

MAGIC VALLEY — Twin Falls and Minico, two teams with head coaches stressing basically the same things, collide Saturday night in Rupert in what will be a precedent setting year for both clubs.

Each is embarking on an 11-game regular season schedule, the first allowed in the state through a quirk in the Southern Idaho Conference schedule that precluded the members from meeting even on a non-conference basis.

Each is trying to come back from rather forgetful years. Minico posted two victories last season, nipping Twin Falls 21-14 in a double overtime for its last win. Earlier it had topped Meridian 34-29. Twin Falls went the entire season without a victory.

Both have new head coaches, Wes Patterson at Minico and Ed Knecht at Twin Falls. Both have heavily stressed fundamentals throughout the pre-season drills, a practice that is continuing in both camps right up to game time.

Both have seen what they consider to be excellent chances for success in the two Magic Valley A-1 schools that haven't been among the state powers with any consistency at all.

Knecht brings a history of college football and has prior knowledge of the SIC through a three-year stint at the helm of the Boise Braves in the early 1960s. Patterson became acquainted with Southern Idaho Conference football and southern Idaho while serving seven years at Blackfoot high school. He took another position in South Dakota but "when the Minico job opened up I felt there was a lot of potential there to establish a successful program for the coach who would put in the time and work it would take to get the tradition started."

Knecht told his Bruins and their parents at a get-acquainted night Wednesday that the Bruins would have no goals beyond each weekend. "If we win the first one we'll be one and oh and try to make it two and oh. If we lose, our goal will be to make it one and one against Caldwell."

Like Patterson, Knecht said his charges are improving every day. "It's a long, old row but these young men have shown the determination and enthusiasm to work and improve," Knecht said.

"We are looking a little better each time we go out (in practice) and that's the most encouraging thing right now," Patterson says. "We have worked very hard. We had some three-a-days and a total of 24 practices before we went into one-a-days. We still are working as much as 40 to 45 minutes a practice on fundamentals. That's what we want to get back to — just blocking and tackling."

While Coach Knecht is a little worried about the lack of actual game experience among his backs, Coach Patterson is happy with the prospects he has carrying the ball. Twin Falls most experienced is senior halfback Pat Allison and he is fighting a leg injury. Minico has probably the premier speedster in the area in Todd Heiner, a senior, but Coach Patterson also is high on a pair of juniors at tailback. "Each of them provides something a little different than the others," he said. "Heiner as the speed, John Patton good speed and excellent quickness. He can slide and move. Glenn Broadhead also has good speed and quickness. The thing I like best is all three are quick through the hole."

Leading the block much of the time is 190-pound fullback Darrell Scott. He is back by Brent Seedal and Joe Mietzner.

The lines match up fairly well at least in size. They range basically from 160 to 185 pounds. Minico has a couple of 200-pound exceptions. But while Coach Knecht worries about the quickness of his forward wall, Coach Patterson sees speed as his smaller line's greatest asset — that and generall good upper body strength.

At quarterback Coach Patterson sees senior Dan Damon and junior Scott Maggard as "very close in ability" right now. He anticipates that Damon has a slight edge and probably will get the starting nod but he will not hesitate to bring Maggard into the fray.

Twin Falls probably will go with Ferrell at quarterback with Smallwood his backup. Neither coach talks much about passing so a ground battle could be indicated.

On comeback trail

Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali shouts he will regain the championship from Leon Spinks upon arrival at New Orleans airport Thursday. Ali will continue his training for the upcoming championship fight Sept. 15.

L.A.'s turn to make decision

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The International Olympic Committee has approved Los Angeles' bid to host the 1984 Games, absolving the city of financial liability and setting the wheels of local government turning in an effort to bring the Olympics to the United States for the first time in 52 years.

The contract was approved by the IOC's executive board earlier in the day in Lousanne, Switzerland and mailed to the committee's 89 members for final ratification. It would guarantee the city complete protection from financial loss should the Games exceed proposed budgets, a point city officials had steadfastly insisted upon.

The final decision from the IOC members is due Oct. 7.

Announcing the IOC's decision, Mayor Tom Bradley held a t-shirt emblazoned "XXIII Olympiad, Los Angeles" to his chest during the news conference.

"Los Angeles from the very outset made it very plain that we would not be responsible for any of the financial aspects," Bradley said. "We have not wavered from this and the contract approved today by the IOC contains this clause.

"The contract ... fully protects the city of Los Angeles. Under no circumstances will Los Angeles be financially responsible for the 1984 Olympics."

John Argue, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, predicted approval by the IOC membership, noting that the members have always followed the lead of the executive committee.

The contract still must be approved the the Los Angeles City Council. Bradley would not predict the council's action.

"I don't try to speculate as to what the City Council will do," he said. "I'm not going out and start construction of any buildings but I'm sure the council will take a good hard look at the contract and make their decision accordingly."

The council saw the contract later in the day and members took different views on exactly what it said. Council president John Ferraro said he believes the contract "protects the city fromn financial liability." Councilman Bob Ronka said, however, he thought the contract contains "loopholes" that could lead to the city absorbing any losses.

Ronka, an attorney from Harvard Law School, said he wants the city attorney to review the contract before any council votes are taken.

Asked about the possibility of a huge budget override as was experienced by Montreal, which hosted the 1976 games, and reported budget problems in Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the 1980 Winter Olympics, Bradley said:

"Lake Placid is a small village with one stop sign. It is not fair to compare Los Angeles to Lake Placid or Montreal. Los Angeles doesn't have to build any facilities as Montreal did.

"We (Bradley and the City Council) think our budget is reasonable and can be met easily."

The proposed budget for the Olympics has not been released.

The contract approved by the IOC executive committee contains a clause specifically saying that Los Angeles does not have financial responsibility for the games and leaving the responsibility up to the U.S. Olympic Committee and the Los Angeles organizing committee.

'No one has beaten Ali twice,' says Dundee

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Muhammad Ali's strategy for his Sept. 15 rematch with heavyweight champion Leon Spinks is simple.

"He don't need no strategy; just be Muhammad Ali," said trainer Angelo Dundee. "That licked everything else before, it'll lick everything else up again. And remember, not one guy has licked him twice."

Dundee and Ali arrived in town Thursday to begin final preparations for the Louisiana Superdome bout. Spinks' arrival was scheduled late today.

"I'm three times as ready as I was the first time," Ali yelled. "He caught me off guard the first time, but this time I am ready."

Always a master showman, Ali clowned for photographers, signed autographs, jabbed at onlookers, danced along the hallways of the airport and shouted at the top of his lungs.

Ali spoke of Spinks as a person who was just borrowing the title he had decided to loan out for awhile.

"He's too ugly to represent the colored folk," Ali said. "The world champ should be pretty. I'm a pretty man. I'm going to shock the world.

"You're going to see the fastest, the baddest," Ali continued. "You think I beat Sonny Liston, you think I pulled it over on Joe Frazier, you think I put it over on George Foreman, Ken Norton.

"You watch. I'm going to wind it up. This is the last time. This is the last fight."

Ali vowed to come into the fight with a more serious attitude, evidenced by his weight, which he said would be between 220 and 225 pounds.

"The whole world will be shocked," Ali screamed. "I will be dancing. I'm already down to 220 pounds, I'll be the first man to do it three times, no trouble. He will go out. It will not go the distance."

On an earlier swing through the city, Ali promised to take care of the champ in four rounds. But Thursday he wasn't saying for sure.

"I won't pick no round," Ali said. "It's my last fight and I'm going to wind up on top.

"I been telling you for years I'm the greatest of all times, and the suckers are writing I'm gone, I'm finished, I'm all washed up. You tell 'em all. I'm here talking loud — and drawing a big crowd."

Super bowl teams to get word early

By United Press International

It won't take long for last year's Super Bowl teams to know where they stand for 1978.

Last season's Super Bowl participants — the Denver Broncos and the Dallas Cowboys — both open the new NFL season at home against quality opponents this Labor Day weekend, as the league opens its 59th year with a new 16-game regular season schedule, two additional playoff teams and an extra game official.

The AFC champion Broncos host Western Division rival Oakland on Sunday and the defending NFL champion Cowboys welcome AFC Eastern Division champion Baltimore Monday night, highlighting the first week of action under the expanded 16-game format. An additional two wild card teams will qualify for post-season play this year — increasing the total number of playoff participants to 10 in the 28-team league.

An extra game official — the side judge — has been added to each game, and the officials may need all the help they can get in Denver's Mile High Stadium, as two of pro football's most bitter rivals clash in the first week.

The Broncos won the first Western Division title in their history last season, and then defeated the wild card Raiders 20-17 in a tense AFC Championship Game.

These outstanding clubs have opposing strengths: Oakland relies primarily on a dynamic offense that features an outstanding offensive line, quarterback Ken Stabler and perhaps the best receiving corps in football — tight end Dave Casper and wide receivers Cliff Branch and Fred Biletnikoff, who was injured in last year's title; the Broncos' major asset is their aggressive "Orange Crush" defense, which allowed the fewest points (148) in the conference.

In Irving, Texas, the talent-laden Cowboys face a Baltimore squad stripped of at least one — and possibly two — of its top offensive performers. Dallas has won 13 straight openers and won't need a strategy to defense the versatile Lydell Mitchell, who was traded to the San Diego Chargers last week.

Mitchell is gone and so, perhaps, is the man who handed off and threw to him — quarterback Bert Jones. Jones suffered a slight shoulder separation in the last exhibition game and will not play Monday night. If the rifle-armed Jones is unavailable, look for the Dallas' "Doomsday Defense" to devour third-stringer Mike Kirkland, who is expected to start. The Cowboys are healthy and loaded, and may have tapped yet a new nugget of talent in receiver Tony Hill, who comes off a brilliant exhibition season. Sophomore runner Tony Dorsett is already looking past last year's 1,007 yards.

"He (Dorsett) hasn't exploded yet this year," Dallas Coach Tom Landry says, "but I think he will when the regular season gets here. The first unit will be working together and he will be playing four quarters. The first time he gets in the open field he will explode, just like he did last year."

Tampa Bay plays host to the New York Giants Saturday night in the official season opener.

In other Sunday contests, Kansas City is at Cincinnati, Miami at the New York Jets, Pittsburgh at Buffalo, San Diego at Seattle, Green Bay at Detroit, Los Angeles at Philadelphia, Minnesota at New Orleans, St. Louis at Chicago, Houston at Atlanta, San Francisco at Cleveland and Washington at New England — the only team in the NFL to compile a perfect 4-0 pre-season record this year.

The Bengals face a porous Chiefs' defense with reserve quarterback John Reaves, subbing for the injured Ken Anderson. Cornerback Ken Riley is the only starting defensive back returning for Cincinnati in same spot as 1977. Rookie Coach Marv Levy has installed a 3-4 defense at Kansas City, featuring rookie defensive ends Art Still and Sylvester Hicks, and has instituted the league's only three-back (Wing-T) offense, with only one wide receiver.

Bob Griese's knee injury will keep the Dolphins' No. 1 quarterback sidelined for at least two months but Miami has a powerful ground attack, especially with the addition of Delvin Williams from San Francisco. Wide receivers Nat Moore (12 TDs in 1978) and Duriel Harris are superb.

The Jets' main weapon is an exciting passing game, featuring quarterback Richard Todd, receivers Wesley Walker and rookie Derrick Gaffney and tight end Jerome Barkum. Top draft choice, Chris Ward, will team with the previous year's No. 1 pick, Marvin Powell, to give New York an awesome young pair of tackles.

Pilots collect volleyball win

GLENNS FERRY — Glenns Ferry started its girls volleyball season Thursday night by sweeping the Shoshone Indians.

The varsity Pilots, with Amy Wertz reeling off seven straight point winners in the second game, defeated Shoshone 15-9, 15-8.

Earlier, Shoshone's jayvees knocked off Glenns Ferry 15-12, 15-11.

Glenns Ferry travels to Kimberly Thursday night.

'Bama-Nebraska game features first collegiate grid weekend

GARY KALE UPI Sports Writer

In weather more properly suited for bathing beauty contests than helmets and pads, top-ranked Alabama and No. 10 Nebraska help kick off the college football season Saturday night in one of the earliest starts involving two major powers.

No. 3 Penn State makes its debut 24 hours earlier when the Nittany Lions take on Temple in Philadelphia Friday night.

Alabama, 11-1 last season, seeks to break a two-game loss to the Cornhuskers (9-3) in the nationally televised contest at Birmingham and extend an 11-game winning streak at home.

The Crimson Tide won the first two encounters with Nebraska in the 1966 Orange Bowl and the Sugar Bowl the followng year. Nebraska routed Alabama in a 1972 Orange clash and tripped the Tide 31-24 last year at Lincoln.

Alabama, which traditionally fields top quarterbacks (Joe Namath and Richard Todd among them), has Jeff Rutledge directing traffic. His favorite receivers probably will be Bruce Bolton and Keith Pugh. Rutledge completed 64-of-107 passes last season from a wishbone offense, gaining 1,207 yards and throwing for eight touchdowns. He was intercepted five times.

The Tides' defense is keyed by defensive tackle Marty Lyons and ends Wayne Hamilton and E.J. Junior.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne was hurt by the graduation of six offensive players from last year's Liberty Bowl squad, but still has guard Steve Lindquist and tackle Kelvin Clark to anchor the line.

Quarterback Tom Sorley and I-back I.M. Hipp are Osborne's main offensive threats. Their problem will be trying to crack the nation's second leading defender against the rush and fourth best against passing.

Penn State presents a balanced offense against Temple. The Lions were 11-1 last season as they averaged 214.6 yards rushing per game and 207.8 through the air.

"I guess we'll throw the ball 20-25 tims a game," says Penn State Coach Joe Paterno. "If we throw more than that, we probably won't be as good a football team."

Chuck Fusina, who holds or shares nine school passing records, returns at quarterback. He completed 142-of-246 throws in 1977 for 2,221 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Penn State has four running backs to take the pressure off Fusina — Mike Guman, Booker Moore, Matt Suhey and Bob Torrey. Suhey gained a combined 1,125 yards in his two previous seasons.

Temple, under Wayne Hardin, was 5-4-1 last season. The Owls lost a pair of 1-point games in their last two meetings with Penn State played in Philadelphia. The scores were 31-30 and 26-25.

In other Saturday action among major schools, Richmond plays Southern Mississippi, North Texas State faces UTEP and Mississippi State takes on West Texas State.

O'Brien decision in Barry case expected

HOUSTON (UPI) — NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien is expected to announce his decision Friday in the Rick Barry compensation case, a spokesman for the Houston Rockets said Thursday.

For signing the star forward from Golden State this summer, the Rockets could have to compensate the Warriors as much as a front-line guard, a top draft choice and cash, according to local reports.

O'Brien was forced to determine the compensation when Rockets President and General Manager Ray Patterson and Warriors' management was unable to reach an agreement. Barry reportedly signed a two-year, $1 million pact with the Rockets.

In four previous compensation cases O'Brien has decided during his two years as commissioner, only one decision has involved the transfer of a player.

Reportedly, the Houston players who Golden State is most interest in acquiring are guards John Lucas and Calvin Murphy.

Also to be announced by O'Brien was Houston's compensation for center Kevin Kunnert, who jumped to the Boston Celtics this past off-season.

Rain wipes out tennis

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. Open fans were unable to see Jimmy Connors play Thursday night as an annoying, steady rain swept away the evening program but about 150 spectators got a glimpse of his bare derriere in the afternoon.

After a dreary day filled with gray skies and off-and-on showers, play was finally postponed in the middle of Vitas Gerulaitis' second round match with Victor Amaya.

Gerulaitis, the fourth seed, won the first set 6-2 but was trailing 5-6 in the second set to Amaya, who nearly toppled Bjorn Borg in the first round at Wimbledon.

The Gerulaitis-Amaya match was the feature of the afternoon card but it was not officially postponed until 9 p.m., some three hours after it started.

The scheduled night matches — Connors versus Australian Steve Docherty and ninth-seeded Manuel Orantes versus Adriano Panatta — were also postponed until Friday.

In the only completed match involving a men's seed, No. 15 John McEnroe, the argumentative 19-year-old NCAA champion, blew two match points in a second set tiebreaker against Chilean Jaime Fillol but hung on through a 20-minute rain suspension to notch a 6-4, 6-7, 6-1 victory.

Connors practiced on court 12 for about 20 minutes in a light sprinkle during the afternoon while about 150 spectators lined the fences around him. Play had already been suspended in the stadium and grandstand and Connors was the only player in action at the National Tennis Center.

Connors helped wipe the court dry by kicking a towel around with his foot, then practiced his groundstrokes for about 10 minutes. He and Chico Hagey, a fellow pro, began a mock-game and Hagey won the first point by drilling a forehand winner down the side.

Connors thought the shot was a lucky one and he showed everyone exactly what he meant.

Turning around, Connors pulled down his warm-up pants, exposing his bare bottom to Hagey and the crowd.

The gesture, an old practice called "mooning," somehow caught the mood of the day.

Both Gerulaitis and McEnroe had a little more trouble than anticipated.

Gerulaitis seemed to bog down as the rain picked up in the second set with barely 500 fans sitting in the wet stadium.

McEnroe blew two match points after taking a 6-4 lead in the second set tiebreaker with Fillol, a 32-year-old Davis Cupper. Fillol won four straight points to take the tiebreaker 8-6 as McEnroe double-faulted to lose the set.

McEnroe should perhaps have been the favorite of those who remained from the overall day crowd of 11,681 but his incessant complaints about calls turned the fans against him.

One crucial complaint by McEnroe brought a replay of a called ace by Fillol on the ninth point of the tiebreaker. Fillol then double-faulted to give McEnroe a 5-4 lead. An angry Fillol kicked the ball across the net, nearly hitting McEnroe. McEnroe went ahead 6-4 but couldn't put away the clincher.

"You try to tell yourself to forget it," McEnroe said. "But that's the hardest thing—to forget it. No one likes to lose when you have match point."

McEnroe felt badly about the crowd reaction to him, and he didn't seem to understand he was the cause of it.

"I was kind of disappointed," McEnroe said of the fans booing him. "It seemed kind of odd. If I was in Chile, they wouldn't be rooting for me. But I'll find out about that in a couple of weeks."

McEnroe is a member of the U.S. Davis Cup that plays in Chile in two weeks.

In other matches, sixth-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia beat Kathy Harter, Culver City, Calif., 6-1, 6-4, and 44-year-old transsexual Renee Richards lost to Ilana Kloss, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4.

Richards, no longer a controversial entrant in the women's draw, was beaten in the first round for the second straight year. Richards fell to Virginia Wade in her opening match last year.

Rene Richards' loss hardly draws notice

NEW YORK (UPI) — Renee Richards lost a tennis match Thursday, and hardly anyone noticed.

Last year, Richards' appearance in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships was an event. The transsexual doctor had won a court battle to play in the Open and the publicity surrounding her first round match against Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade put her in the midst of a three-ring circus.

Many people ventured to last year's Open hoping to see some sort of strange sideshow on center court at Forest Hills but they were disappointed. What they saw was a 43-year-old player lose to a superior Wade in straight sets.

In the year since the last Open, Richards has maintained a low profile. She rarely gives interviews any more, particularly where her sex change operation is concerned. She joined World Team Tennis, gradually gained the acceptance of her colleagues and worked hard to condition herself for this year's Open.

This time she drew 22-year-old South African Ilana Kloss in the first round and she felt she had a good chance to advance. She had trained well, Kloss was a more even match than Wade and she was no longer a curiosity piece.

But playing unobtrusively before a sparse crowd in the 6,000-seat grandstand of the National Tennis Center on a dismal and rainy day, Richards fell short of her goal.

Umpires agree to strike ban

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — With attorneys for both sides agreeing to the move, a federal judge Thursday continued for 16 days a temporary restraining order which bans a strike by 52 major league baseball umpires.

The ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Joseph McGlynn, Jr. came after he heard two days of testimony on a request by the American and National Leagues to make permanent the temporary ban he issued last Friday, halting a one-day walkout by the umpires.

The continuance, until another hearing on Sept. 15, came after attorneys for the Major League Umpires Association agreed they were willing to wait for the written opinion that would explain any decision the judge would make.

The judge had said he was willing to make his ruling on the ban immediately. There were indications in the remarks McGlynn made during a closing argument by John Markle Jr., an attorney for the umpires, that he was prepared to rule against the association and continue the strike ban.

The umpires struck last Friday, claiming the leagues had failed to negotiate in good faith over job-related issues. The leagues charged that a five-year contract which does not expire until 1981 had a no strike clause and they went to McGlynn for the temporary restraining order.

Union attorneys called seven major league umpires, officers and members of the union's executive board. Testimony raised a question as to the validity of the five-year contract on the grounds that the former attorney for the association was not authorized to sign the agreement reached in March 1977.

The umpires also said that the written agreement they received about a year later contains a number of discrepancies.

During negotiations in March, Markle made reference to what he said was a questionable contract agreement.

But McGlynn interrupted:

"Several witnesses testified there was an agreement reached. There was an agreement. There might be a dispute as to whether it was written."

The umpires are demanding that the leagues renegotiate certain issues including requests for a one-week vacation, increase in the four-man crews, increase in the $52 daily expense allowance and tenure.

They are not demanding a present increase in their salaries which range from $6,500 to $39,000 based on longevity. The average salary presently is $30,000.

During the morning session, National League umpire Robert Engel, president of the association, testified that his reaction was "incredulous" when he received a printed booklet in the mail in the spring of this year.

Richard Phillips, attorney for the umpires, said the booklet "purported to be" the agreement on a new contract reached in negotiations with Chub Feeney, president of the National League and Lee McPhail, American League president, in March, 1977.

Engel said he had continually pressed John Cifell of Chicago, then attorney for the association, for a final draft of what had been agreed upon in the March 1977 negotiating session between the league presidents and the members of the association's executive board.

He said he had never given written or verbal authorization to Cifell to sign the agreement.

"I told him either myself or members of the board or whatever it took wanted to sign the agreement if we ever got to read it," Engel said.

Engel and other witnesses said the agreement in booklet form that they received in the mail was different from what they understood had been agreed upon in the March 1977 negotiations.

David Phillips, an American League umpire, and vice-president of the association, testified that after the final negotiating session, "we never had any document stating what was agreed to to relate to our membership."

Jim Evans, another American League umpire and board member, said he told Cifell "to be absolutely sure he did not sign anything because the members were giving me all kinds of heat."

The umpires maintain they have a right to strike in a current dispute with the leagues over job-related issues, such as vacations, tenure, and an increase in per diem allowances.

Yanks edge Orioles for seventh in row

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Bucky Dent doubled and singled for two RBI while Lou Piniella smashed his fourth home run and scored twice Thursday night, enabling the New York Yankees to extend their winning streak to seven games with a 6-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Trailing 2-0, the Yankees rallied for three runs in the sixth inning off loser Scott McGregor, 12-12, aided by a pair of Orioles errors. After designated hitter Cliff Johnson's leadoff single in the sixth, Dent doubled for one run, went to third when McGregor missed the outfielder's cutoff throw and came home on Mickey Rivers' double. Rivers then went to third on a sacrifice bunt and scored the go-ahead run when third baseman Doug DeCinces kicked away a pickoff throw.

Piniella socked a leadoff home run in the seventh inning for the fourth Yankee run and Sparky Lyle notched his eighth save with 2 1-3 innings of relief for winner Dick Tidrow, 6-9. Jim Spencer's bases-loaded sacrifice fly, which scored Piniella, and an RBI single by Dent closed out the New Yorks scoring in the ninth.

Billy Smith singled across the first Oriole run in the second inning before coming around for the second on Kiko Garcia's triple.

Padres 6, Expos 1

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Jerry Turner drove in two runs Thursday, helping the San Diego Padres snap a three-game losing streak with a 6-1 victory over Montreal, the fifth straight loss for the Expos.

Turner gave the Padres a 1-0 lead in the first with a single that scored Gene Richards, who opened with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Ozzie Smith. The Padre outfielder then doubled to left in the third, driving in Smith who had walked. Montreal scored when Andre Dawson doubled and Gary Singled in the sixth.

The Padres put the game out of reach with three in the seventh. Tucker Ashford, Dave Winfield and Gene Tenace each collected a run-scoring single.

Eric Rasmussen, 14-10, earned the victory with help from Mark Lee who relieved in the sixth when Montreal scored its only run. Woodie Fryman, 7-9, was the loser.

Reds 11, Cards 6

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Joe Morgan, George Foster and Johnny Bench hit home runs Thursday night to power Cincinnati to an 11-6 romp over the St. Louis Cardinals which snapped the Reds' six-game losing streak.

Morgan hit a three-run homer in a seven-run second inning after Fost led off with a solo homer, his 31st. D Driessen and Bench singled and Louis losing starter Silvio Martin 8-7, hit Cesar Geronimo to load t bases before Ray Knight and Da Concepcion singled in runs a Morgan hit his homer. Ken Griff then singled, took second on a ba and scored on Foster's single.

Bench hit a solo homer, his 19th, the fifth.

Cincinnati starter Tom Seaver, 12, allowed a run in the sixth on triple by Garry Templeton and a w pitch. Reliever Tom Hume gave the other runs when George Hendri singled home Lou Brock in the eigh and Wayne Garrett belted a gra slam homer in the ninth, his second.

Twins 4, Tigers 1

DETROIT (UPI) — Rich Chiles an Glenn Adams hit home runs combine for three RBI Thursda night and power the Minnesota Twin to a 4-1 victory over the Detro Tigers.

Geoff Zahn needed seven outs c relief help from Mike Marshall t record his 10th win against 13 losse Marshall earned his 17th save.

Chiles hit his first home run of th season and sixth of his career wit two out in the fifth inning to break a scoreless tie against loser Kip Young 5-4. Roy Smalley led off the seventh inning with a double and two out Lafer distracted Young enough wit his antics on third base so that Adam could reach the rookie right-hander for his seventh homer of the season The Twins' final run came in the nint on a sacrifice fly by Bombo Rivera.

Zahn had his shutout ruined in th seventh inning when singles by Jaso Thompson, John Wockenfuss an Aurelio Rodriguez scored the lon Detroit run and brought on Marsha to get the final out of the inning.

Brewers split

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Andr Thornton belted a three-run home and Tom Veryzer and Rick Mannin each drove in a pair of runs Thursda night to spark the Cleveland Indian to a 12-6 victory and a double-heade split with the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ben Ogilvie's 15th homer gave lef hander Mike Caldwell his 17th victor and the Brewers a 1-0 decision in th opener despite a three-hit effort b Cleveland starter and loser Mik Paxton, 9-8.

The Indians ended a string of 2 scoreless innings by pushing across three runs in the first inning of th nightcap on a single by Paul Dade, walk to Buddy Bell and Thornton 27th homer into the left field stands.

Wilson earns honors

DENVER (UPI) — Brigham Young University quarterback Marc Wilson edged out New Mexico fullback Mike Williams in balloting by the Western Athletic Conference sportswriters for preseason player of the year honors.

The 22 voting writers gave Wilson 10 votes with Williams getting nine and Wyoming running back Myron Hardeman three.

Wilson, a junior, led the Cougars to the NCAA passing title a year ago, throwing for 2,438 yards, 26 touchdowns and an average of 221.6 yards pe game. The 6-5 standout took over l midseason after Gifford Nielsen wa injured and led the Cougars to a shar of the WAC title with Arizona State.

CSI to conduct pack horse clinic

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's Aggie Rodeo Club will conduct its second annual pack horse clinic Sept. 11 and 12, announces Shawn Davis, club coach and advisor.

Davis said a $5 fee will cover instruction, lectures and slide presentation on packing, shoeing, safety and mountain riding. A demonstration and practice session on packing hitches for participants will be conducted. The clinic also will include a talk on rules and regulation on use of public lands and wilderness areas by Bob Haog, U.S. Forest Service representative.

Further information may be obtained by calling Davis at 733-955, extension 320.

M.V. amateur opens Saturday

TWIN FALLS — A full field is assured for the annual Magic Valley amateur golf tournament which opens at Twin Falls municipal golf course Saturday morning.

Host Professional Don Hamblin said pairings for the first day include 197 players, but noted only those who had paid prior to Thursday evening were assigned times.

"We have had many others who have given verbal commitments and we have left a couple of starting times vacant both Saturday morning and afternoon to accommodate those who will be coming in from out of town or were unable to officially enter because of conflicts," he said. He added the tournament does not want more than 212 in the field because of the derbies.

The championship flight is a little light with most of the Lions of Summer having gone back to college. Hamblin said a total of 19 was included in the title flight "not big on numbers but some good talent."

The flight breakdown by handicap ran 0-6 championship, 7-9, first flight; 10-13, second flight; 14-15, third flight; 16-19, fourth flight, and 20-24, fifth flight. He added 24 was the maximum handicap allowed.

Competitive highlight of the tournament will be the six derbies. Flights four, five and six, drawing its field from the 10 best scorers in each division Saturday, will play at 4 p.m. Saturday. The championship, first and second flights will hold their derbies at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The field should enjoy a dinner-dance at the Twin Falls Elks Lodge Saturday night.

Pairings for Saturday's opening round include:

Wood River welcomes near-record turnout

HAILEY — In three years the Wood River Wolverines have gone from nobody out for football to the largest turnout in eight years.

Just what all that means to the Wolverines will start to be shown at 1 p.m. Friday when they host American Falls in the season curtain-raiser.

Coach John Hopkins was most pleased with the fact that the program seems to have turned around since Wood River had to cancel its season for lack of interest two years ago.

"We have good team size, increased spirit and enthusiasm and the best turnout for varsity football in the last eight years," he said in listing the team strengths.

Another thing that would buoy Wood River's chances for a successful season would be if senior running back Steve Morey could escape the injuries that plagued him last year. As a junior Morey was the heart and soul of the Wood River offensive but early in the year reinjured a knee and after several other banging arounds, the youngster had to give up on trying to finish the rest of the season.

Coach Hopkins has 12 lettermen to build around. All are seniors, including Morey, a 180-pound fullback; Tom Loutzenheiser, 205-pound tackle; Mark Metcalf, 135-pound wide receiver; Scott Basolo, 155-pound wide receiver; Steve Burk, 175-pound defensive end; Mitch Head, 135-pound defensive safety; Martin Stephens, 175-pound defensive end; Jeff Lee, 175-pound tackle; Tom Bergin, 175-pound quarterbac; Rich Lee, 205-pound tackle; Curtis Uhrig, 145-pound safety, and Tracy Peterson, 145-pound safety.

Graduating from last year's Jayvee squad are Chip Barker, 185-pound tackle; Marvin Hepworth, 165-pound guard; Lance Bergkamp, 165-pound linebacker; Mike Seal, 145-pound linebacker; Jubal Farrow, 145-pound safety; Hal Swensen, 155-pound end; Brian Christiansen, 140-pound halfback; Jonathan Angle, 200-pound tackle; Sam Carlsen, 150-pound guard; Stacey Broadie, 165-pound guard; Don Angel, 150-pound safety; Ty Loutzenheiser, 200-pound center, and Jamie Atkins, 220-pound tackle. The latter two are sophomores.

Coach Hopkins anticipates they'll all be tough in the South Central Idaho Conference and a visit by Bishop Kelly on Sept. 22 is seen as the toughest among the non-conference foes.

The Wood River schedule includes Sept. 1, American Falls at Wood River; Sept. 8, Wood River at Kuna; Sept. 15, Wood River at Fruitland; Sept. 22, Bishop Kelly at Wood River; Sept. 29, Mountain Home at Wood River; Oct. 7, Wood River at Snake River; Oct. 13, Wood River at Buhl; Oct. 20, Gooding at Wood River, and Oct. 27, Jerome at Wood River.

Chenier okays surgery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After seven months of considering several other possibilities, Washington Bullets guard Phil Chenier plans to have surgery to correct a degenerative disc problem in his back.

Chenier, 27, who played in 36 games last season and none after Jan. 8, plans to talk with doctors this week to determine the type of surgery needed.

"I definitely want to play basketball some more and it seems like having the operation is the only way I can do that," Chenier told the Washington Post. "I tried other things but they just didn't work."

Chenier is entering the fifth year of a seven-year, $1.7 million contract. Having tried accupuncture, rest, exercise and therapy, Chenier became resigned to surgery.

Jets will go with NFL's youngest team

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Forgive Walt Michaels if he feels more like a camp counselor than a National Football League coach.

Michaels will put probably the youngest football team in the NFL on the field at Shea Stadium Sunday when his New York Jets play the Miami Dolphins in their first season opener at home since 1964.

The Jets' final 45-man roster, which includes 10 rookies and three free agents, averages a mere 1.7 years NFL experience. Only one player — guard Randy Rasmussen — is over 30.

"We're younger this year than last year but we have progressed," said Michaels, who Thursday agreed to a new long term contract. "I'm not downgrading the people who left but we have young guys on this team who are learning and just coming into their own in this league.

"Our defense is young and they need experience but they all can be solid football players. We wouldn't keep a guy if we didn't think he had a future in football. I think what we lack in experience we make up for in enthusiasm."

Michaels' "Kiddie Korps" is also faced with the toughest schedule in the NFL this season and the Jets' coach doesn't think the fact Dolphin quarterback Bob Griese was knocked out for the season in the final exhibition game last week will hurt Miami.

"Miami will be just like always, except for Griese," said Michaels. "They're a sound football team and they have big play people. They pound away at you and all of a sudden, they've got a score. They used to do it with Paul Warfield. Now they just use different people. They just keep grinding away until something breaks.

"Defensively, they try to get you to make mistakes. They're improved this year, despite Griese's injury. They're young and aggressive and Don Strock can throw. He's a good passer.

"Don Shula is still their coach and they're not going to do a whole lot different. Coaches get a philosophy and go with it."

Michaels feels that Strock can handle the task of replacing Griese.

"There isn't going to be that much difference," Michaels explained. "People are going to get fooled on how good Strock is. He's been around for five years and this is about the time he should start doing something. He just could break loose with this opportunity. If a quarterback's going to come on, look for it around his fifth year."

Michaels feels the Jets' biggest improvement this year has been in the offensive line, where Chris Ward, the No. 1 draft choice from Ohio State and the fourth player chosen overall, joins Marvin Powell, last year's top pick.

Stevenson sets U.S. ring debut

NEW YORK (UPI) — Teofilo Stevenson, the two-time Olympic heavyweight boxing champion, makes his United States debut at Madison Square Garden Oct. 6 when the Cuban national team takes on a U.S. team, Garden boxing director John Condon said Thursday.

"It's all set," Condon said. "We're waiting to announce it."

Condon said Stevenson, unbeaten in the ring, would head a program matching the Cuban team against an Amateur Athletic Union team using Olympic boxing rules, Stevenson's opponent has not been determined, Condon added, but the leading candidate is Jimmy Clark.

"It could be any one of two or three guys, possibly Jimmy Clark," Condon said.

Condon said Madison Square Garden worked through Bob Surkein, chairman of the AAU boxing committee, to bring the Cuban team with Stevenson to the U.S.

"Negotiations started with (Garden official) Mike Burke and it became a small project on my part when I was in Yugoslavia for the world amateur championships," Condon said. "Most of the business was through the AAU and Bob Surkein. We'll pay the AAU a fee and they'll take care of Cuba."

Condon said he didn't know what the fee would be.

AWOL Eller may miss Minnesota's opener

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Minnesota Vikings defensive end Carl Eller, who has missed just one of 196 regular-season games in his 15-year career, is AWOL and could be out of football for the season if he doesn't report to practice by Friday, the Vikings warned Thursday.

Eller, 36, a six-time all-pro who has won virtually every award given to defensive linemen, has been absent from practice since Sunday because he is unhappy with provisions of the three-year contract he signed last year.

The Vikings obtained permission from the NFL Monday to put Eller on a special reserve list and they gave him until Friday to return to camp.

If he does not return to the team by Friday, he could be declared ineligible for the entire season.

Both Eller and the Vikings front office have been silent about the situation.

"I'm trying to resolve some deep, soul-searching questions in my mind," Eller said earlier.

Eller is being assessed $250 for each missed meeting and practice, plus $250 for being absent from the Vikings' Welcome Home luncheon Monday. The fines were established in the collective bargaining agreement between the league and the players association.

The Vikings open the regular season Sunday at New Orleans. If Eller does not play, Coach Bud Grant can fall back on fourth-year man Mark Mullaney, who is pushing hard for a starting job, and rookie Randy Holloway.

But the Vikings will have veteran center Mick Tingelhoff, who will make his 225th consecutive regular-season start Sunday against the Saints. Tingelhoff was hospitalized during the pre-season with a serious leg infection but has recovered in time to keep his string of starts going.

"I don't know if he'll play the whole game," Grant said, "but he'll start if he can put his uniform on."

Jones definitely out

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Baltimore Colts quarterback Bert Jones will not play in the seasoner opener Monday night against the Dallas Cowboys because of a shoulder injury, the Colts said Thursday.

A spokeswoman for the Colts said Coach Ted Marchibroda and team physicians decided it was best that Jones sit out Monday night's game because of the injury to his right shoulder suffered against the Lions.

Facing old team 'odd' for Harvey

DENVER (UPI) — Maurice Harvey, a rookie defensive back acquired by the Denver Broncos earlier this week, said it will be strange playing against the Oakland Raiders in the NFL opener for both clubs at Mile High Stadium Sunday.

The 5-foot-10, 190-pound speedster from Ball State was one of the Raiders' final cuts and was picked up immediately by the Broncos.

"It does seem a little strange," Harvey said as the Broncos worked out Thursday. "Watching film one day thinking you're going to be going against Denver, then finding out you're going to be going against your old team instead."

Although Harvey said he has no grudges against the Raiders, he said he never was sure what Oakland expected of him.

"I'd practice at safety one day and the next day I'd be playing cornerback," he said. "Here, they've already told me that everybody has to know all the positions.

"But there are no bitter feelings, no regrets. It's over with. I'm a Bronco now. I went out there and did the best I could, but I guess they wanted somebody with more experience. When they brought Monte Jackson in a trade from Los Angeles, I figured what might happen."

Although he has been with the Broncos only since Tuesday, Harvey said he is excited about playing with the team.

"There's a big difference between here and Oakland," he said. "These dudes seem a lot younger and I think they can relate to me better. They've got some good defensive backs here. I feel a lot more comfortable here in one day than I did the whole time in Oakland."

Defensive backfield Coach Richie McCabe said there is no doubt there will be an immediate spot for the young athlete.

"We're definitely going to use him on our coverage teams," Braden said. "You look at Oakland's exhibition game films and there's this guy tackling a guy on the 12-yard line on a kickoff return. You look at another film and there's the guy busting up the middle and taking three guys out of the wedge. I hope he's feeling a little resentment toward Oakland."

Bronco Coach Red Miller said he had considered Harvey as a possible third or fourth-round draft choice.

"He's quick and physical," Miller said. "We've seen some of the work he's done for Oakland, and he looks like a hitter."

Michigan St. names aide

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Dave Harshman, assistant basketball coach at Nebraska, has been named to a similar position at Michigan State.

He replaces Don Monson, who departed recently to become head basketball coach at Idaho. His appointment is subject to confirmation by university trustees.

A spokesman also announced Idaho State graduate David M. Henry was named strength and conditioning coach, a newly created position in the department of athletics.

Make those decisions in the morning hours . . . and then think

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is excellent for making decisions under which you would like to operate in the days ahead. The rest of the day can well be spent studying details to make your principles work.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your creative ideas and find an outlet so you can gain the benefit. Contact influential persons who can be helpful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Bring your finest ideas to the attention of prominent persons now and get excellent results. Try to have more harmony at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Discuss a problematical affair with an associate before making plans for the future. Get into the right frame of mind.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure monetary matters are in fine order, then discuss the future with experts. Take time to study creative ideas.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Improve your appearance and use your charm to gain the support you need from others. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Keep your personal plans private before taking them to those who can help you carry through with them. Use good common sense.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know exactly what your personal aims are and work on them with confidence. Talk over the future with a wise friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study every angle of a new duty before you handle it. Use good judgment and don't rely on your intuition at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study new ways to increase success. New contacts can be most helpful to you at this time. Think constructively.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) First keep promises you have made, and then you can delve into new projects that interest you. Study your aims objectively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have fine ideas for advancement, but study them well before bringing them to the attention of higher-ups. Be logical.

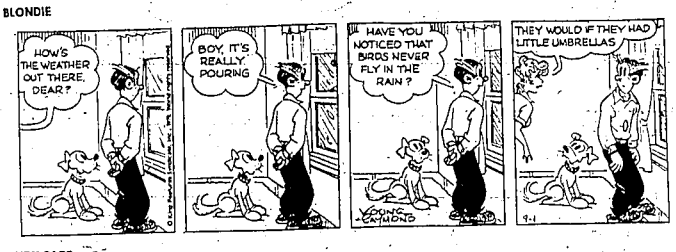

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Now is the time to put your finest ideas in operation. Come to a better accord with family members. Take time to study creative ideas.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have much ability at understanding detailed plans, so be sure to provide the best education you can afford, and success is assured. Make sure you teach good manners early in life. There's superior music talent here.

Poured coffee down the trucker's shirt, stuff like that. Anyhow, they kicked him out. And the next thing they heard was this guy pulling out of the parking lot with a lot of banging and clattering. When they ran out to look, all they saw was the tail of his truck disappearing down the road, and their three motorcycles smashed flat. Where. . .?"

Raft River opens against Firth today

MALTA — The Raft River Trojans, who coaches say should battle with Murtaugh for the Magic Valley Conference title, will open their football season today by invading Firth.

The Trojans, who compiled an 8-1 record last year, have 15 returning lettermen but Coach Keith Wilson, noting a relatively light turnout of underclassmen, said lack of depth will be the team's major problem.

Coach Wilson also joins the continuing conference chorus on half of the favorites' role at least. He anticipates that Murtaugh will be the major game of the conference schedule and Declo will be toughest among non-league opponents.

The Trojans lost of solid talent and speed to graduation last year but returns experience at all offensive spots but end. Highlighting that is the return of two-year quarterback Boyd Richens, the roll-out expert. He's 5-10 and 170 pounds and has lettered twice. At halfback is Lloyd Richen, also a two-year letterman with the same vital statistics.

Other senior veterans are Scott Carter, 150-pound halfback; Stephen Freiburger, 175-pound tackle; Guy Neddo, 170-pound tackle; Peter Nielsen, 150-pound guard; Kyle Fowles, 145-pound guard; Gene Bliss, 170-pound defensive guard, and Kurt Smith, 140-pound linebacker.

Newcomers to the varsity are Larry Rodocker, 180-pound defensive tackle; Marshall Ward, 200 pound center; Robert Thompson, 150-pound guard, all juniors, and freshmen Royce Booth, 150-pound center, and Brad Hutchinson, 145-pound center.

The Raft River schedule includes Sept. 1, Raft River at Firth; Sept. 8, Declo at Raft River; Sept. 13, Raft River at Oakley; Sept. 22, Hagerman at Raft River; Sept. 29, Raft River at Hansen; Oct. 6, Raft River at Mackay; Oct. 14 Kimberly at Raft River (1:30 p.m. homecoming), and Oct. 20, Murtaugh at Raft River.

Oakley young despite having 18 lettermen

OAKLEY — It seems paradoxical to say that a team with 18 returning lettermen will be young but that's the way the Oakley Hornets stack up this season.

Coach Dave Egbert and his Hornets open their season at 8 p.m. today when they invade Kimberly in a traditional curtain-raiser.

Coach Egbert points out the squad is composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores with a sprinkling of seniors and juniors.

"Game experience is going to be out biggest problem," he maintains, "with seven upperclassmen with experience — four seniors and three juniors. We have some good sophomores and freshmen but it will take a few games to get going."

Actually the coach does have more juniors and seniors than indicated and almost all the team's size is found in those to grades.

Back for their fourth varsity seasons are 165-pound halfback Jeff Mitton and 250-pound tackle Curtis Gorringe.

Men with two varsity years behind them are Kevin Baker, 200-pound fullback; Robert Bell, 155-pound guard; Victor Rodruguez, 190-pound tackle, all seniors, and juniors Trent Robinson, 160-pound halfback; Todd SMith, 160-pound end, and Nels Peterson, 165-pound end.

Other lettermen include Brian Jenks, 140-pound quarterback; Calvin Napier, 155-pound guard; both seniors; Shaun Critchfield, 150-pound end; Kasey Jackson, 150-pound guard; Wayne Ellson, 145-pound end, all juniors, and sophomores, Vince Cooper, 155-pound guard; Alex Bedke, 155-pound end; Marty Adams, 145-pound fullback; Martin Warr, 140-pound halfback, and Mike Woodhouse, 140-pound defensive end.

Squadmen and newcomers to the team this year will be senior Alan Simmons, 150-pound end; sophomores Javier Breseno, 140-pound guard, and Dave Ward, 135-pound guard, and freshmen, Stormy Oldham, 180-pound tackle; Mark Cranney, 145-pound quarterback; Andy Nelson, 155-pound center; Tony Rodrguez, 130-pound end; Tex Tolman, 140-pound guard; Lindsey Altom, 130-pound halfback; Vince Anderson, 130-pound end; Richy Barber, 140-pound guard, and Raymond Critchfield, 140-pound guard.

Coach Egbert, like the rest of the Magic Valley Conference, sees Raft River and Murtaugh battling it out for the championship.

The Oakley schedule includes Sept. 1, Oakley at Kimberly; Sept. 8, Shoshone at Oakley; Sept. 15, Raft River at Oakley; Sept. 22, Murtaugh at Oakley; Sept. 29, Oakley at Mackay; Oct. 6, Oakley at Hagerman; Oct. 13, Oakley at Hansen, and Oct. 20, Declo at Oakley.

'Original Bengal' loses spot

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Veteran Cincinnati Bengals' center Bob Johnson, the first player the team ever drafted, and who likes to call himself "The Original Bengal," has lost his starting job to rookie Blair Bush.

Bengals Coach Bill Johnson (no relation), calling it one of his toughest tasks ever as a coach, informed Johnson that he will be replaced by Bush in Sunday's NFL regular season opener against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Johnson has started 139 of the Bengals' 143 games in the past 10 years, missing the other four games only because of a broken ankle.

When Bush was drafted out of Washington earlier this year, Bengals officials said he would be groomed "to eventually replace Johnson."

"Eventually" came sooner than expected.

"I don't know any other way to say it but we've got to go with who has impressed us the most and Blair Bush has impressed us as a center," said Bill Johnson. "Blair does a better job of run blocking on the noseman. I could've started Bob and eased Blair in, but that's just not the way to go about it."

Reacted Bob Johnson, "I'm disappointed to a degree, but I can understand it. I can't say I'm devastated by what happened. Blair has done very well. If people are hep at about it, you can objectively understand the decision.

"There comes a time when these things happen. I don't know what will happen as the year goes on. But it's not my decision anyway. I told them I'd play any position they'd want — tackle, guard. They've been good to me. I'll do whatever I can for them."

LEGAL NOTICE

Treasurer. The City Clerk-Treasurer shall collect and receive all deposits, connection fees, water service charges and other funds payable by law to the City with respect to the municipal water system. The City Clerk-Treasurer shall keep accurate and complete records of all funds received, dates and amounts received, names of payors and accounts credited, together with accurate and complete accounts of all disbursements, showing the date and amount thereof, payees, and accounts debited. All funds received or held shall be deposited by the City Clerk-Treasurer in a bank duly authorized to accept such deposits, pursuant to the Idaho Code. Provided, however, that funds received in the form of deposits to secure payment of water service charges shall be deposited to a special fund known as the "Water Service Deposit Fund" where such funds shall be retained for a period of six months; and, if bills are rendered monthly during this period and each bill is promptly paid, or if the owner (or agent) has requested that water service currently be terminated, the amount of the deposit shall be refunded without interest, less any sum that may be due to the City for any charges or fees related to the municipal water system.

D. Billing. With the approval of the City Council, the City Clerk-Treasurer shall establish a date or series of dates on which water service charge bills are sent to owners (or agents) of property or premises using or consuming water from the municipal water system. Billings shall be rendered according to this schedule, and if the bill for a previous month has not been paid by the time a current bill is prepared, the delinquency shall be shown as an arrearage in addition to the current monthly service charge. In such a case, if the owner (or agent) does not pay the arrearage within fifteen (15) days after the billing is rendered, the City Clerk-Treasurer shall cause a notice to be issued to such owner (or agent), stating that the account is delinquent, and that if the amount of the delinquency is not paid within fifteen (15) further days, water service will be shut off, funds on deposit will be applied against the delinquency, and water service will not be re-instated except upon payment of a new deposit and a $5.00 resumption of service fee. The notice shall also advise the owner (or agent) that if he contests the amount of the delinquency, or seeks relief from shutting off water service, he must apply in writing at the home of the City Clerk-Treasurer for a hearing before the City Council, prior to expiration of the fifteen (15) day period. If such written application is received, water service will not be shut off until the City Council has conducted a hearing and has made its determination of the case.

E. Lien and Collection of Delinquencies. Any delinquency which is not offset by funds on deposit with the City Clerk-Treasurer shall become a lien against the real property to which water services were furnished, upon recording, at the office of the Twin Falls County Recorder, the City Clerk-Treasurer's sworn certification of the delinquency. The City may collect such delinquency by commencement of a civil action, and, if such action prevails, the City shall be entitled to award of its costs and a reasonable attorney's fee. When a delinquency has been recovered following recording of a lien, satisfaction of the lien shall be recorded. In the alternative to collecting by commencement of a civil action, the City may certify under oath the amount of the delinquency to the Treasurer of Twin Falls County who shall, upon receiving such certification, include the amount of the delinquency in the next assessment of real property taxes against the premises in question, to the extent that such action is authorized by applicable provisions of the Idaho Code.

SECTION 6: Prohibited Conduct.

A. Waste. No owner, agent, or other person shall waste water or allow water to be wasted by imperfect or leaking stops, valves, pipes, closets, faucets or other fixtures, or use water closets without self-closing valves or use water in violation of any City ordinance regulating use of water. Water shall not be used for agricultural purposes excepting gardens and lawns and (10) head of stock or less, unless fee for additional stock is paid as set out.

B. Work on City Streets, Property or Rights-of-Way. No owner, agent, contractor or other person shall perform any work in relation to the municipal water system, in or upon any City street, property or right-of-way, without furnishing the Water Department a plan of work contemplated and securing from the Water Department approval for the work to be performed. The Water Department may prescribe such terms and conditions, including the provision of an appropriate bond or other reasonable security, as the circumstances may warrant.

C. Tampering with System. No person, unless duly authorized by the Water Department or City Council, shall disturb, interfere with, or damage any water main, water pipe, machinery, tool, hydrant, appurtenance, appliance, building, improvement or other facility belonging to, connected with, or under the control of the Water Department of the City of Hollister.

D. Foreign Substances. No person, unless duly authorized by the Water Department, shall place, or cause to be placed, any substance of any kind into the water stored or transmitted in the municipal water system.

E. Connections or Resumptions. No owner, agent, contractor or other person shall cause any property or premises to be connected to the municipal water system except in accordance with this ordinance, nor turn on or resume without permission of the Water Department any water service that has been interrupted or terminated for any reason.

F. Obstruction of Access. No person shall obstruct, or cause or allow any obstruction to, the access to any fire hydrant, water main, water pipe, machinery, tool, appliance, building, improvement or other facility of the municipal water system.

G. Removal of Water From the City Limits: No person shall cause a water pipe or other means of conveyance to be constructed, temporarily or permanently, for the removal of water from the City Water System from the City limits.

SECTION 7: Enforcement.

A. Deprivation of Water Services. If the Water Department determines that any owner (or agent) of property or premises that are or could be served by the municipal water system or any contractor or other person acting at the direction of the owner (or agent) has engaged in any of the prohibited conduct enumerated in the preceding section, or has otherwise intentionally or repeatedly violated the provisions of this ordinance, the Water Department may give notice in writing to such owner (or agent) that water services will be withheld or terminated, unless the owner (or agent) applies in writing within fifteen (15) days for a hearing before the City Council and during that hearing shows cause why he should not be deprived of water services. In making its determination, following such a hearing, the City Council may direct that water services be withheld or terminated, that water services be furnished, or that water services be furnished upon such terms and conditions as the Council finds reasonably necessary to protect the municipal water system.

B. Criminal Penalties. It shall be unlawful and punishable as a misdemeanor for any person knowingly to engage in any prohibited conduct enumerated in the foregoing section, or otherwise knowingly to violate any of the provisions of this ordinance. Each day that such prohibited conduct or violation occurs or continues may be deemed a separate offense. In the event of such prohibited conduct or violation, the City, in addition to or in lieu of such criminal prosecution, may bring an action for damages and/or injunctive relief; and, if the City prevails in such action, it shall be entitled to an award of its costs and a reasonable attorney's fee.

SECTION 8: Conflicting Ordinances. All orders, by-laws, resolutions and ordinances, or parts thereof, in conflict with this ordinance, are hereby repealed. This repealer shall not be construed to revive any order, by-law, resolution, or ordinance, or part thereof heretofore repealed.

SECTION 9: Severability. If any section, paragraph, clause or provision of this ordinance shall for any reason, be held to be invalid, or unenforceable, the invalidity or unenforceability of such section, paragraph, clause or provision shall not affect any of the remaining provisions of this ordinance.

SECTION 10: Effective Date. This ordinance shall be, effective on the 28th day of August, 1978.

service line. Provided, however, more than one such lot, property, building or residence may be served from a single line if the owner (or agents) owns unconditionally to the City by written instrument an easement approved by the Water Department giving to the City and the public access along the full route of the service line in question; and provided, further, that each such lot, property, building or residence shall remain subject to separate and additional imposition of fees, charges and deposits under this ordinance. Granting of the easement provided in this subsection shall not constitute a dedication of the land or private service line to the City, nor shall it be construed to constitute an assumption by the City of dominion, control or responsibility over the land and private service line.

G. Freezing, Leaks and Blockages. The Water Department shall be responsible for all freezing, leaks and blockages in water mains and those portions of private service lines presently installed by the City of Hollister within City street rights-of-way, but the owners (or agents) of properties served shall otherwise be responsible for private service lines and shall pay the cost of thawing or repairing such lines whenever necessary.

H. Responsibility of Owner (or Agent). The property owner (or agent shall be responsible for all maintenance of private service lines outside City rights-of-way, and shall also be responsible for the initial installation of such lines within City rights-of-way, at the owner's (agent's) cost, from the property boundary to the point of connection with the City's main water line.

SECTION 4: Operation of Municipal Water System.

A. Ownership of Facilities. Ownership of all water mains, extensions, and appurtenant equipment installed by the Water Department shall be vested in the City of Hollister; and in no case shall the owner (or agent) of any property or premises have the right to claim reclaim, remove or damage any part thereof.

B. Interruption of Services. The City reserves the right at any time, upon reasonable notice when circumstances permit, or without notice when notice cannot feasibly be given, to interrupt or terminate the water supply when necessary for repairs, extensions, other work on the system, or non-payment of fees or charges; and the City shall not be responsible for any damage resulting from such interruption or termination.

C. Access to Premises. Employees of the Water Department, other employees of the City, and persons under contract with the City, properly identified, shall have free access at reasonable hours to all property or premises to which water may be delivered from the municipal water system, for the purpose of inspecting the condition of the mainlines, service lines, fixtures, other system facilities, or the manner in which water is used.

D. Hydrants. The Water Department shall install, maintain and keep in repair all City fire hydrants and shall control such hydrants. No person other than a duly authorized employee of the City, or individual serving under contract to the City, shall change or interfere in any manner with the adjustment of fire hydrants or the valves connected therewith.

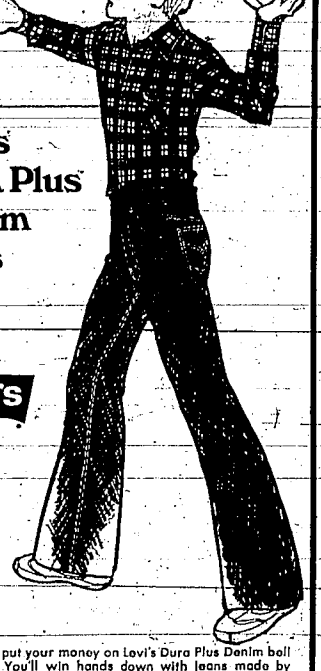

SECTION 5: Service Charges and Accounting Procedures.

A. Service Charges. The following charges shall be imposed for use or consumption of water from the municipal water system, from and after November 1, 1978: To users or consumers within the corporate limits of the City of Hollister, $2.4 per month for each unit of consumption unit. To users or consumers who have more than 10 head of livestock on their property located within the City limits, $600.00 per year.

B. Temporary Cessation of Service at Owner's Request. If an owner (or agent) desires that water service to certain property or premises temporarily cease for a period greater than one month, such owner (or agent) may apply in writing to the Water Department to have the water shut off, and during this period, no [illegible] charge shall be imposed. Provided, however, [illegible] such temporary cessation shall not exceed five (5) years, and, provide, further, that upon request of the owner (or agent) of the property, for whom water service shall not entitle the owner (or agent) to any relief from payment of water service charges. Whenever water service has temporarily ceased upon application of the owner (or agent), it shall be re-instated only upon payment of a five dollar ($5.00) fee for resumption of service which shall be imposed and included in the first month's billing after service is re-instated.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The Professor studied the dummy for a full five seconds. Then he played its ace of spades and led a trump. East played the deuce and the Professor went right up with his king. When it held he led a second trump, bumped the ace and queen together, conceded two spade tricks (dummy could ruff his last card of that suit) and was ready for the next rubber.

"How did you work out the trump situation?" asked the student. "West had bid. Wasn't he more likely to hold the ace than East?"

"You're right about that," replied the Professor. "I didn't really think I was going to make my contract. However, I did give the cards the only chance to produce for me."

The Professor's analysis was correct as usual. He could not make his contract if East held the queen of trumps. Change the ace and queen around: South's jack would force West's ace, but West would simply play three spades and East would overruff dummy with that queen of trumps.
